UNEMPLOYMENT IN CANADA AND THE WAY TO OVERCOME IT

IN 1900 UNITED STATES LOST BILLION DOLLARS IN WAGES ALONE—SUGGESTS THAT CAPITAL BE AD-VANCED TO PROSPECTIVE FARMERS.

Unemployment is a complicated problem. The more it is studied the more complicated does it become. When for the purpose of detailed study, we attempt to isolate the various elements, we find that despite our efforts they simply run into one another. We try to trace a chain of causes and effects and find ourselves chasing around a circle in which, with bewildering rapidity, the effect becomes a cause and then again an effect. We think we perceive the general and inevitable tendency of certain movements, and then discover that unknown factors, as it were hidden undercurrents have falsified all our calculations.
We survey the problem in its length and breadth and depth and then learn to our dismay that we have neglected that important but mysterious fourth dimension —the time element. Social forces are dynamic, they are also spiritual. And the ways of the Spirit who can tell? So it is with difficulty that we can offer any conclusions on even such a pre-eminently practical problem.

The importance of the problem can hardly be exaggerated. Mr.
Louis Brandeis characterizes it as "the worst and most extended of industrial evils." Since Canadian statistics are not available, let me give those concerning the United States, where conditions may be presumed to be similar to our own:

The United States Census for 1900 showed that 6,468,964 working people, or nearly twenty-five per cent. of all engaged in gainful occupations, had been unemployed some time during the year.
Of these 3,477,753 lost from one to three months each, representing on the basis of $10 a week a loss in wages of approximately $200,000,000. 2,554,925 lost from four to six months work each, representing a wage loss of approximately 500,000,000; and 736,285 lost from seven to twelve months' work each, representing a wage loss of approximately $300,000,000. Thus approximately $1,000,000,000 was lost in wages in the year.

In 1901 the Federal Bureau of Labor investigated 24,402 working class families in 33 states and found that 12,154 heads of families had been unemployed for an average period of 9.43 weeks in the year. The New York state Department of Labor collected reports each month during the ten years 1901-1911 from organized workmen averaging in number 99,069 each month, and found that the average number of unemployed each month was 14,146 or 18.1 per cent.

Unemployment has no doubt been intensified by the present abnormal conditions but it should not be forgotten that it is essentially a problem of industry, world wide and chronic. The real question is not the numbers of the unemployed, but the cause of unemployment.

With a population of only some seven millions we have brought into Canada in a single year as many as 400,000 people. Transplantation, always a delicate process, has in this instance been rendered more difficult by the fact that many of the immigrants are European peasants, unfamiliar with our language and modes of life and of the English immigrants many are city-bred—not a few of them failures at home.
Our Canadian immigration policy and administration has been hopelessly inadequate to the successful carrying out of such a serious undertaking. Individualism in this country has run riot.
A comparatively small group has obtained control of our natural resources, of our industries, of the machinery of transportation and commerce, and of government itself. The rapid flow of money into the country has encouraged speculative rather than productive enterprises. The combination of these and other such causes have led to a rapid shifting of the population from the rural districts to the cities, which have grown with remarkable rapidity. So long as the tide was running full, there was general prosperity. Many fortunes were made. Although individuals suffered, the general expansion of industry, together with the outlet offered by accessible free lands, often afforded relief—or the hope of relief. But now that the tide has turned the unstable, unorganized condition of affairs has become painfully apparent and much suffering must inevitably result. Those who have benefited by the abnormal conditions should now be the last to declaim responsibility for the burden which manifestly belongs to the community, but which now presses most heavily upon individuals—and these the most helpless.

What should be done? Labor exchanges will help, but other supplementary lines of effort are essential.

The welfare of the workers in Canada should be protected. Minimum standards should be maintained. The tendency is for the newcomer, anxious to get a start to be willing to put up with the very low standards of living.
Those who are unwilling to lower their standards are crowded out and thus the lower standard tends to become normal. For example, housing accommodation available for Canadian workmen is generally very inferior—whether in the cities, or on the farm, or in the construction camps. Wages for unskilled labor have dropped in Canada to "the single man standard," which means that on the present basis labor cannot perpetuate itself. Minimum wage legislation would not only protect Canadian wage-earners directly, but would probably, as has been pointed out, act as an immigrant tariff, regulating the numbers and quality of immigrants.

But in my judgment we should go farther than this. We have bonused industry, subsidized steamship and railway companies and stimulated immigration. We should now provide productive work for the immigrants, whom we have encouraged to come to us, and for the Canadians who have been displaced by the economic and social readjustments which have resulted from the coming of the immigrants.

As Canada is pre-eminently fitted for the great industry of agriculture, why should not the government foster its development? The granting of 160-acre homesteads is not sufficient. In our western towns and cities are thousands of both English speaking and non-English speaking people who have tried farming under existing conditions and failed. There are thousands more who would gladly farm if there was any possible chance of their doing so. In addition to legislation for which the farmers have been seeking, arrangements should be made for advancing capital to prospective settlers, expert supervision and for settlement in closer communities.—

Journal.

LOBSTER TO BE FOOD
OF BRITISH SOLDIERS

St. Johns, N. F., Jan. 18.—The British soldier at the front will feast on lobster, if the proposal of this colony to sell at a low price is accepted by the War Department, it has been learned.
The bulk of the colony's canned lobster output usually is sold in Germany, but this market has been closed because of the war.

DISTRESS IS RELIEVED.

Permits Issued Allowing Deer to Be Killed for Meat Supply.

Vancouver, Jan. 9.—With a view to relieving any distress among poor ranchers and others living in the Interior, the attorney general, as head of the game department, has instructed Game Warden Williams to issue special permits out of season. Many of these permits have already been issued, and have proved a great boon. The game wardens, constables and government agents are reporting on any cases where the issuance of a special permit is desirable and proper precautions are being taken to prevent abuse.

An interesting case submitted to the attorney general comes from Fernie district, where a poor widow with four children is in need of food supply. Game Warden Williams would very readily issue a permit to her, but it would prove of no avail without a man to trail the deer and fire the gun. The novel request is to be made that one of the deputy game wardens may hunt on her behalf whenever a deer is required by the little family.

The great value of the game department in ridding the forests of animals of prey, and of protecting the deer is seen today, when the deer, which are abounding in plentifulness in the Interior, provide a valuable meat supply in time of need.

It takes but a slight jolt to transform the average optimist into a remorseless kicker.
