Later on the society intends to provide them with implements for working their gardens and fields, and seed for the new year's harvest. It seemed to me rather beautiful, the Order of the Star, carrying hope where desolation had passed. Of course, the men say, though their work is appreciated and not interfered with they are closely watched by the police. That, in these days of spying, is inevitable. I got two little pictures from a lady this evening that I cannot help repeat. She had been asked by friend in Scotland to try and reach the grave of the latter's son. He belonged to a Highland regiment, and was killed in September, when the Germans were driven back on the River Aisne. She knew where he was buried. and yesterday in company with the chaplain of the Red Cross succeeded in reaching the place. At every village they came to it was necessary to interview the maire, show papers, and explain their purpose and destination. Usually this maire was a well-todo villager, but once, to their surprise, the motor turned into a long avenue of trees, ending in front of a stately chateau. Here, in a panelled room hung round with family portraits, they found the owner, who was both Monsieur le Marquis and maire of the the big house, with one old serauthorizing the company to lay out, con- vant to look after him. And now the second is gone. You must have noticed how obstinate the fighting has been in the Argonne. It is very difficult ground, people tell me, with ravines, and thickly wooded. A field ambulance is to be sent up there shortly, and the nurses have been told to prepare themselves for living in tents. So Canada has reached the firing line. In this morning's paper is a notice of the wounding of an officer belonging to the Princess Patricia's Own Light Infantry. And yesterday in a French paper three men appeared of another regiment, also Canadian, that had just arrived at Ypres. Canada could not be more in the center of things than at this little old Flemish capital just now. May confess it: Months ago I hoped the war would end before the Ca nadians could possibly arrive. dreaded for Canada the death tol that it levies. But it seems as if the peace of the future must be bought with blood and tears. And the best. And for Canada the call is of the blood.

for Prince Rupert and Northern B.C.

The Daily News goes into nearly every home in Prince Rupert. It is the popular newspaper of the city because it is clean and reliable. It has all the news of the city, and keeps in touch with events and topics interesting to Northern British Columbia. It treats these subjects with moderate optimism and reliability.

The Daily News is the most valuable paper to advertisers because it is read by the buying public. It has a bigger circulation than any other paper in the city. It is read by the class of people the advertisers want to talk to.
