Mr. Winston Churchill's Optimistic Speech in the House of Commons.

London, Feb. 17.—Mr. Winston Churchill gave a review of the naval situation in introducing the navy estimates in the Commons Monday. He said that at the outbreak of the war the supplies of ammunition, men and oil were complete. Every ship in the navy which was fit for service as well as new ships which were being built for foreign governments and armed merchantmen had been fully manned.

"In fact, the German army was no more prepared for an attempted war on a gigantic scale than was the British fleet for national defence," he said.

"After six months of war, with new dangers and difficulties coming into view, we have every right to be content with the results of our labors in making provision for the navy."

After referring to the naval battles off the Falkland Islands and in the North Sea, Mr. Churchill said: "Only two small cruisers and two armed merchantmen remain of all the German preparations to attack our trade routes, and these are in hiding."

"During the six months of the war," Mr. Churchill said, "Great Britain's total losses at sea, including all ships except trawlers, amounted to only sixty-three. Nevertheless, it was necessary to be on the lookout for another German attempt to harass British trade routes."

"Although the ocean is a black prospect to a German cruiser," he said, "we should be able to meet any new attempts with resources incomparably superior to what we had at the beginning of the war."

Referring to Admiral Jellicoe's command of the sea with his fleet as "silent, unsleeping and as yet unchallenged," Mr. Churchill said that the Admiralty had moved men at home and abroad, including Belgian and French troops and the wounded to the number of one million without an accident or the loss of a life. Mr. Churchill said that the recent cruiser action in the North Sea, although incomplete, was of great significance because of the light which it had thrown upon questions concerning armament, design and relative gunnery, which was both important and encouraging. Referring to the steaming qualities shown by the British cruisers, Mr. Churchill said that "the navy is sound as a bell all through."

"The engagement showed that there was no reason to assume that, ship for ship, man for man, gun for gun, Great Britain would not give a very great account of herself. The Germans in our cruiser action thought only of flight, while we thought only of battle," he continued.

"They were wise in their thought. If they had thought otherwise they would have been destroyed. No falsehood about the action could obscure that cruel fate. When, if ever, the grand fleets draw out for battle, we shall hope to have a fleet superior in both quality and numbers."

Make Monday Ironing Day

LET Sunlight Soap do your washing Monday morning and you can do the light ironing Monday afternoon. The rub, rub, rub at the board has no place in the Sunlight way—so with the hardest part of washing cut out you'll feel like making it a good day's work by doing at least part of the ironing.

Follow the directions that cut your work in half and remember there's nothing in Sunlight to injure fine fabric or dainty hand. A $5,000 guarantee backs this statement.
