TORTURED BY CONSTIPATION

"Fruit-a-tives" Cured Paralyzed Bowels and Digestion

"It is a pleasure to me to inform you that after suffering from Chronic Constipation for 2 1/2 years, I have been cured by "Fruit-a-tives". While I was a student at Berthier College, I became so ill I was forced to leave the college. Severe pains across the intestines continually tortured me and it came to a point when I could not stoop down at all, and my Digestion became paralyzed. Some one advised me to take "Fruit-a-tives" and at once I felt a great improvement. After I had taken four or five boxes, I realized that I was completely cured and what made me glad, also, was that they were acting gently, causing no pain whatever to the bowels. All those who suffer with Chronic Constipation should follow my example and take "Fruit-a-tives" for they are the medicine that cures."

MAGLOIRE PAQUIN "Fruit-a-tives" are sold by all dealers at 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. or sent postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

BOY SCOUTS DOING SERVICE IN ENGLAND

Have Done Good Service in Patrolling and Searching For Spies

Boy scouts are primarily peace organizations, and the 16,000 that comprise the "army" of Boy Scout Commander Lieut.-Gen. Sir Robert Baden-Powell, K. C. B., in England, are strictly so. Sir Robert, we are told by a British writer in The Congregationalist, has taken every possible precaution, even in these times, to prevent the Boy Scouts movement from taking on a warlike complexion. But notwithstanding its peaceful intent, the organization is proving of great service to Great Britain just at present. They can be put at any one of a hundred tasks for which intelligent, faithful, and untiring workers are now needed. We are told that their services were invaluable when war was declared, in calling reservists to the colors. Nor were they less so, when, through the necessitated return of many of the coast-guards to the navy, a host of watchers at the coast-guard stations were needed. We read that:

Hundreds of Scouts took their places and had the time of their lives staying out all night or watching all day through big telescopes for the enemy's ships. It was a hardened northern journalist who confessed that a lump came into his throat when late one night he met a small group of Scouts dragging their trek-cart, laden with bivouac gear, and moving quietly through the dark to their vigil on the cliffs. One senior coast-guard, expecting Scouts to assist him, brought what he considered enough meat for them for a day, but was greatly troubled because he had no one to cook it. When the lads arrived they informed him that the meat was sufficient for two and a half days' rations and they always did their own cooking. At odd times the youthful assistants have tended the coast-guard's garden or nursed the coast-guard's baby, urging the little one, regardless of sex, to grow up a Scout. Is any one surprised that when they had to go home more than once their coast-guard fathers to love? Anybody's place was filled by them at a moment's notice.

Boy Scouts have been well to the fore in all national medical services. Members of the Third Plymouth Troop are at the Salisbury Road Hospital taking messages and attending wounded soldiers in the intervals of listening, wide-eyed, to their yarns. First aid, ambulance work, collecting beds from donors, and preparing wards are commonplace of Scout activity. Many Scouts have acted as patients at Red Cross lectures and have submitted, with grins, to the incidental bandaging and posturing. At least once a would-be nurse undergoing examination has been aided by a timely whisper from the patient, whose Scout knowledge of the triangular bandage or the occipital artery has turned failure to success.

But the duty that has the real thrill in it for these peaceful warriors is spy-hunting. In addition to the patrol of the coast, many boys have been put to patrolling the interior, watching all roads, and guarding closely the approaches to all light-houses, powder magazines, and other spots dear to the spy's heart. Some instances of their achievements in this line are given:

Few incidents have thrilled the young hopefuls like those which have involved contact with spies, a real or suspected. One spy not to be known from an Englishman by voice or manner has been going about England on a motor-cycle, disguised as a Scoutmaster. He offered fresh fruit or mineral waters and even medicines to lads on sentry duty, and tried to engage them in conversation. The posting of warn-

CHEAPER GASOLINE AND DYES BASES GIVEN TO NATION

Secretary Lane Announces Important Chemical Discoveries Made by Dr. Walter F. Rittman.

Washington, March 5—Two discoveries, both of vast importance to American industries, and one regarded also as a priceless military asset, were announced yesterday by Secretary Lane of the Interior Department. They are chemical processes, developed after years of research by Dr. Walter F. Rittman, chemical engineer of the Bureau of Mines.

One is expected to enable oil refiners to increase their output of gasoline by 200 per cent; the other makes possible the production from crude petroleum of toluol, and benzol, bases for dyes and high explosives, for which in the past the United States and the rest of the world has depended almost exclusively on Germany.

Will Prevent Monopoly.

Dr. Rittman has applied for patents upon his processes to prevent the possibility of any monopoly in their use and will dedicate them to the American people.

"These processes," said Secretary Lane, "are fraught with the utmost importance. The Standard Oil Company has had a big advantage over the independents in production of gasoline, having a patented process obtaining three times the amount of gasoline from a given quantity of petroleum the independents now obtain."

"Now the Federal government, through the efforts of Dr. Rittman, proposes to make free for the use of all a process confidently ings against him led to his disappearance. Of course, the boys have more than once been mistaken. One suspect duly reported to the police turned out to be a British evangelical preacher. Any one acquainted with the eccentricities, sartorial and otherwise, of certain of our English spellbinders would find it easy to excuse the youngsters.

There are, unfortunately, certain Englishmen who can not resist the temptation of playing jokes on the lads. Two passing cyclists attempted a trick on a couple of the boys on duty. They dismounted, loitered about, examined carefully everything within their range of vision, and finally climbed a telephone pole. One Scout hurried off for the police while his comrades cut the tires of both cycles into shreds, and no one was sorry for the humorists. Scouts are more ready to report their failures than their successes. But here is one entirely authentic case that must serve as a sample of others. A Scout patrol noticed a suspicious-looking person and kept him under observation. He was near an aeroplane station, and after they had tracked him across a golf-links they discovered him in hiding and writing in a note-book. They fetched police to arrest him, and he turned out to be an undoubted and dangerous spy.

expected to increase their yields of gasoline fully 200 per cent and perhaps more. Dr. Rittman claims his process is safer, simpler and more economical.

"With a steadily increasing demand for gasoline for automobiles, motor boats and engines, this fortunate discovery comes at the proper time. It is but two years ago that the automobile industry, fearful the supply of gasoline might not be adequate for its rapidly expanding business, offered a $100,000 prize for a substitute that would cost less than gasoline. This new process adds to the hope that in spite of the wonderful growth in the use of gasoline, there may not be any shortage in the future.

"I am led to believe it will not only be of inestimable value to refiners commanding but limited capital, as well as those of wealth, but also to the hundreds of thousands of users of gasoline. "When it is realized the gasoline industry each year yields $100,000,000 to $150,000,000, the importance of this discovery is seen."

True in the Main.

"She says she has remained single from choice."

"That's right. I wouldn't undertake to say whose choice it was, but the broad, general statement is unquestionably true."—Stray Stories.
