THE INDIA BILL IS VETOED BY LORDS

Objection Taken to the Creation of Executive Council for United Provinces.

London, March 18.—The Daily News, in an editorial article, says the House of Lords marked its last sitting yesterday before the Easter vacation by a vote "the echo of which, it is feared, will ring throughout India."

The viceroy and the lieutenant-governor of the United Provinces had urged upon the Imperial government the creation in that province of an executive council to assist the lieutenant-governor.

"That," says the News, "is a reform demanded by public sentiment in that province, and it belongs to the memorable scheme of development which Lord Morley initiated. The Imperial government, accordingly, drafted a proclamation and established an executive council, but before this proclamation came into effect it must be on the table in both Houses of Parliament for a term during which either House may object to the issue of it."

"No objection was taken in the Commons, but yesterday Lord Macdonnell moved a resolution against the proclamation. He enjoyed the support of Lords Sydenham and Curzon. The opposition put their official whips against the government and the motion was passed by forty-seven against twenty-six. The draft proclamation creating an executive council is therefore dead.

"In vetoing it, the Lords have struck, in the midst of a great war, a heavy blow at the prestige in India of the Imperial government of India."

LEATHER LOOKED LIKE SOAKED BROWN PAPER

Interesting Testimony of Officer at Boot Enquiry at Ottawa.

Ottawa, March 17.—Interesting disclosures and enlivened passages characterized yesterday's sitting of the parliamentary boot enquiry. The witnesses under examination were the Halifax officers who conducted the local investigations, and their evidence supported the findings then made. It was brought out in the evidence of Major Doane that after the soles of certain boots issued the men were through, they put shingles and bits of board in, and in some cases bound up their feet in bags.

Captain A. M. Jones, of the 25th Battalion, Halifax, told of an enquiry on January 5 concerning the boots issued on November 13. One hundred and seventy-two boots on a route march were looked over. The board had found that the boots soaked up water like paper.

"What was the condition of them as you observed it?"

"Well, after a march in the snow the uppers looked like soaked brown paper."

"There was no particular test to which these boots were put; you were simply living in barracks?" asked Mr. Macdonald.

"Yes."

"I see that some of the men were barefooted?"

"Yes; we could not make them parade."

"Then these 172 men were prevented from receiving the training and drill needed to fit them for service?"

"I can not speak for the whole 172, but my men could not do their usual heavy work."

"How long had the boots been worn?"

"About seven weeks."

"Did you wear the same kind of boots?"

"No."

"Was the work hard on the boots?"

"Hard on boots such as they were."

AMBASSADORS FROM DOMINIONS

Montreal, March 18.—The Gazette's London correspondent, in a cable despatch dated last night, says:

"In connection with Premier Borden's recent statement in reply to Sir Wilfred Laurier's question to the effect that the status of the high commissioner's office was under consideration, the Gazette's London correspondent has learned that an important readjustment of the constitutional relations between the Imperial and overseas governments will be the latter. An effort will be made to convert the high commissioner's office into an ambassadorship. At the present time the office is recognized by courtesy and usage. Thus, while diplomatic negotiations pass between the colonial office and the Governor-General of Canada, the high commissioner is consulted and made acquainted with what is proposed or what is being done. If the commissioner were made an ambassador, he would negotiate directly between the Imperial and overseas governments. Moreover, he would enjoy the social recognition and the distinction attached to the rank.

"Closely allied with the question is that of the agents-general of the provinces. Some months ago, those who were in England at the time had a conference at which the matter of their status was discussed and, but for the war, some agitation would have been created. The agents-general claim that in some phases of public matters, particularly those affecting their provinces, they are more familiar with the questions to be dealt with than the high commissioner's office and they would like to have the right to deal directly with the Imperial government, particularly on certain questions, such as emigration, education, etc., when the matters affect their provinces. These are details of the larger questions of inter-relations of the Empire which, it is expected, will be readjusted at the close of the war."

WAR OVER IN SIX MONTHS.

London, March 20.—The Daily Telegraph's correspondent at Petrograd telegraphs:

"General Oba, who from the commencement of the war has represented the Japanese army on the staff of the Russian commander-in-chief, but is now returning to his own country, takes back with him a most favorable impression of the fighting qualities of the Russians, and is very optimistic in his view regarding the issue of the campaign.

"In an interview with the Bourse Gazette he said it was his firm conviction that the efforts of the Germans had already passed the point of culmination, and that point he conceived to be the operations of General Von Hindenburg in December on the Warta. From that time the German attack had been on the wane. It could already be felt that the Germans were wasting away. Even their shells had recently been not of steel, but of cast iron, and that clearly indicated their exhaustion.

"He was fully convinced that when the Russian troops assumed the aggressive the enemy would be swept away.

"Asked how long in his opinion the war would last, General Oba said he believed peace could hardly be delayed more than six months."
