"And behold, she has three gigantic arms with three torches of universal corruption in her hand. The first torch represents the flame of war, that the beautiful courtesan carries from city to city and country to country.

"The second torch bears the flame of bigotry and hypocrisy. It lights the lamps only in temples and on the altars of sacred institutions.

"The third torch is that of the law, that dangerous foundation of all unauthentic traditions, which first does its fatal work in the family, then sweeps through the larger worlds of literature, art and statesmanship.

"The great conflagration will start about 1912, set by the torch of the first arm in the countries of Southeastern Europe. It will develop into a destructive calamity in 1913. In that year I see Europe in flames and bleeding.

"After the year 1925 I see a great change in religious sentiments. The second torch of the courtesan has brought about the fall of the church. The ethical idea has almost vanished.

"And behold, the flame of the third torch which has already begun to destroy our family relations, our standards of arts and morals. The relation between woman and man is accepted as a prosaic partnership of the sexes.

New York, April 9.—Rutledge F. Gardner, of Baltimore, who stands nearly seven feet in his stockings and who fought with a British regiment in France, will never fight again. He's cured. He said so positively yesterday, having returned from abroad only recently.

"Because of my height," he claims, "the British officers used me to draw the fire of snipers. The big idea was that I should poke my head above the trenches, the snipers would fire and the British sharpshooters would then locate the snipers. No more for mine. I'd rather be the periscope of a German submarine in the Thames River."
