(1) The British Columbia Year "only about one twenty-fifth of the area of British Columbia' is agricultural land." That is less than 11,000,000 acres.

The Dominion census returns for 1911 (Vol. IV, p. vii) records 22,618,000 acres as the total amount of possible farm lands in British Columbia.

The report of the Surveyor General for British Columbia for 1914 was that the total area of surveyed lands in this province
