ILLUSTRATED LECTURE IN SALVATION ARMY HALL

On Wednesday evening the staff captain will give an illustrated lecture on "The Life and Work of General William Booth." He will show over one hundred and fifty views of the general's work in the early days of the army, and also results of his labors all round the world. There are also some magnificent views of the general's last motor tour. The views of the funeral procession winding its way through the immense crowds in London, carrying the remains of the founder of the Salvation Army to his last resting place are exceptionally fine and impressive.

The staff captain is a good speaker and accompanies himself with the banjo or concertina when singing, and the local Salvationists are therefore looking forward to an interesting series of meetings. All are heartily welcome to these services.
