For Half a Century!

We all know that the best results in any given line of business or industry are those produced by specialists—those who have devoted years of time and study to their work.

Our experience as diamond merchants extends over a period of 55 years, during the whole of which time we have adhered strictly to the rule laid down by the founders of the business—“Name but the best.” We are actually specialists in fine diamonds.

Mrs. L. J. P. Surprised Her Guests

Her name is withheld at her request.

Mrs. P. had guests for supper on Tuesday. They had a vegetable salad.

On Wednesday two of the ladies called up for her salad dressing recipe.

Mrs. P. gave it, of course. She says the only secret is that she uses Pacific Milk in an otherwise very ordinary dressing—and gets a delightful flavor.

KEEN RIVALS MEET AGAIN

Grand Trunk and Callies will be Interesting Game Tonight

This evening's football game between the Callies and the Grand Trunks will be watched with much interest by those who have been following the course of these two teams. In the first game of the league they played to a 2 to 2 draw. They then downed all opponents and it was decided to meet on Dominion Day for the special cup. Here again they played to a tie, so tonight's game will be the concluding game of the series. In the meantime the Grand Trunk have got a little edge of their opponents by beating them in a 1 to 0 game last Monday, which was the first fixture of the second half of the league matches.

George Russell will be the referee and his skill at keeping the game clean adds greatly to the pleasure of the spectators desiring to see good football.

The Callies team will be made up as follows—Goal, W. R. Martin; backs, Harry Menzie and Jack Stewart; halves, Jas. Currie, W. Murray and A. Matthews; forwards, White, J. Boote, T. Black, R. Wiggins and George Sellars.

DISAPPEARANCE OF PILCHARDS CAUSE OF SPECULATION

The reported mysterious disappearance of pilchards (known farther south as sardines) from the waters of Vancouver Island is causing a good deal of interest and some anxiety among fishermen and canners just now, says the Pacific Fisherman. No pilchards have been caught since last fall by the fishermen operating along some portions of the island coast, and it is stated by parties who have investigated the matter, that large quantities of dead pilchards have been found in the bays and harbors to the south of Nootka Sound. This has given rise to the theory that a disease has killed off the fish wholesale. On the other hand, officials of the Fisheries Department state, a similar emigration of pilchards has occurred along the California coast, and it is thought that the disappearance may be only temporary and due to the little known spawning habits of the fish. Their return is awaited by a number of canneries, one of which, in fact, planned to commence canning them some time ago.

Vancouver Island canners and fishermen are particularly interested in the pilchard because nearly the whole catch of last summer—valued at more than half a million dollars—was taken in Vancouver Island waters. The pilchard only became commercially important in the fishing industry of the province three or four years ago, the canning of pilchards resulting from the food scarcity of the war. In 1917 the first big run of pilchards was seen in the straits of Juan de Fuca and they were first canned in that year at Nootka. In the following year huge schools appeared along the coasts of south and south-eastern Vancouver Island and they were canned at many canneries along the coast in considerable quantities. Little is known of the habits and life history of the fish, but many fishermen declare that the future of the pilchard industry in British Columbia is very important, though many problems connected with the taking, preserving and marketing of the fish will have to be solved.
