EVIDENCE IN ASSAULT CASE

Hearing of Urlacher Assault Case Starts in Police Court; Remanded.

In the police court this morning evidence was taken in the case of Rex vs. Urlacher in which the accused has been held on a charge of inflicting serious bodily harm to James Garnett. The case has arisen out of a fight on the night of Sunday, June 27, when Garnett was taken to the hospital in an unconscious state. At the opening all the witnesses were ordered from the court room until called by the court. W. O. Fulton appeared for the accused and City Solicitor Hooper acted for the prosecution.

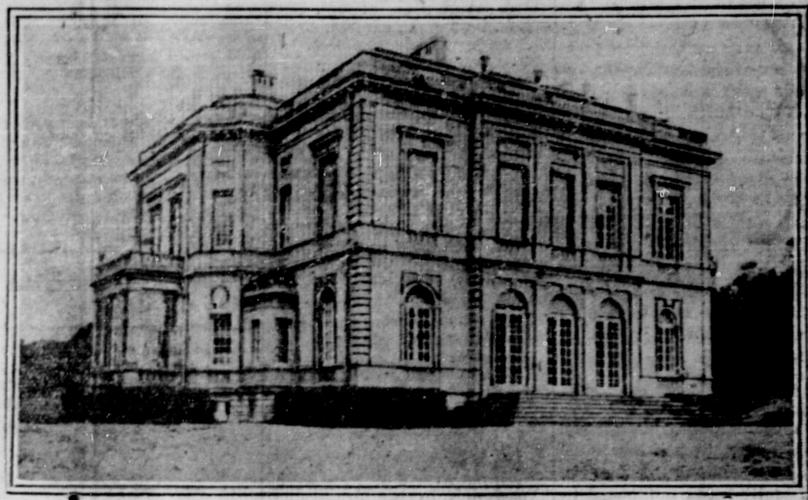

The first was C. A. Eggert, doctor of the city of Prince Rupert, who had been summoned to the local hospital on the night of the 27th to attend to the wounds of James Garnett. He found the victim in a deeply unconscious state, bleeding at the nose and mouth. The patient had sustained a fracture at the base of the skull and was suffering from paralysis on half of the left side of the body. Garnett had a wide abrasion on the left side of the temple but the physician was not prepared to state how the blow might have been delivered. The patient seemed to be improving but lacked co-ordination, which the doctor went to explain by saying that he could not concentrate for any length of time. The period of convalescence might be a long one but he was not prepared to state for certain.

Constable McGlinchey described having received the phone call to proceed to the scene of the fight, where a man was reported to have been "knocked out." On arrival there he found James Garnett unconscious on the street. He summoned a taxi and Gus Steputis took the helpless man to the hospital. On June 28 he arrested the accused in a shack on Fraser Street and warned him in the usual way. The accused admitted at the time having struck the man but not kicking him.

Gus Steputis was then called and described how he met his partner Garnett at Anxox some months ago. He described how the fight started when an old man pestered him for drinks and he refused to give him any, both at the Royal and the Empress bars. At the Empress, Good told him to quit picking on the old man and this was what brought about the first quarrel. They went around the corner and he gave his coat to James Garnett. He did not see much of the fight between the accused and the man now in the hospital. On cross-examination he told that during the fight someone was on his back and he felt a kick near the shoulder blades. There were many people around before the end of the fight. When asked if he had taken a foul hold he said no but had grabbed him round the waist in a clinch. He admitted that the old man cried out that he did hold him foul. During the course of events he had heard no words between Garnett and the accused.

Fred Williams told of how he had seen the two fights taking place on opposite sides of the street. He did not see the start and was going home when he heard further shouting and returned. The injured man was not on the ground until he was knocked down and he was not close enough to see if the accused did anything after the fall. He did not know any of the parties and couldn't remember the man with the gold teeth in front who had been fighting with Steputis. Ernest Unwin told of having seen the fighting but did not recognize the accused. A man was hurt and he helped Fred Williams lay him out on the sidewalk. He noticed his face bleeding, he was breathing heavily and smelt strongly of liquor. It was a haphazard fight and rocks were thrown but he had no idea who the parties might have been.

When called, Leonard Knight told of the way in which the fight started and of its progress. He was watching the first fight and did not see how the other got under way. He had noticed the accused trying to stop the fight between Steputis and Good at the time the latter claimed the foul hold. In the second fight he only saw the accused standing alongside the man on the ground.

On account of the wide brimmed hat he thought the accused was a policeman and decided to go away. He thought that Garnett had been under the influence of liquor, and half of those standing around as well. He had not taken any himself. Upon cross-examination he said that it was some other man who kicked Steputis in the back and not Good. He did remember another man having interfered besides the accused. He did not know what had stopped the accused from entering again and stopping the fight.

Following the hearing of the remaining three witnesses, Fritz Schultz, Frank Aldridge and C. H. Good, the magistrate remanded the case until July 23.

ARE TRYING TO SAVE BUILDING

Creditors are Pressing for Payment of Six-year old Construction Bill on Vancouver Y.M.C.A.

VANCOUVER, July 16.—Renewed efforts to save the Y.M.C.A. building are to be made here. Creditors of the Y.M.C.A. for the construction of the Georgia Street building are pressing their six year old claim for payment, and are even threatening to take action against the old building and assets on Hamilton Street.

About $300,000 worth of construction has been put into the Georgia Street building, the progress of which was hindered by the collapse of the realty boom in 1914 and the inability of many of the guarantors to make good on their guarantees. About $300,000 is needed to complete the building. Two years ago a "drive" was made but failed by $24,000 to realize enough to complete the building and under the conditions of the "drive" all pledges were released as the total amount required to complete the building had not been obtained.

Several local syndicates are said to have their eyes on the property, as the $300,000 of construction is now worth very much more than when put into place in 1913 and 1914. Its value as a residential hotel or convention centre has attracted notice. Y.M.C.A. circles are very anxious to renew efforts to have the building completed.
