

Pasty and Not so Heavy as Meat

Beat together, 1 cup of bread crumbs, 1 cup grated cheese, 1/2 cup water, 1 egg; add a little red pepper and salt; put into a greased dish; brush the top with butter and bake half an hour. This is surprisingly good and is not so heavy as meat. Try it. It is, as you see, quite simple.

TOOK PICTURES BORNEO WILDS

Frederick Burlingham Hobnobbed with Dyaks of Borneo—Narrative of Experiences

Fresh from a daring expedition into the wilds of Dutch Borneo, Frederick Burlingham, director of the Paramount-Burlingham Adventure Pictures, and formerly associated with the Lasky Film Corporation, reached Victoria today aboard the liner Fushimi Maru from the Far East, says the Victoria Times.

The moving picture expedition conducted by Mr. Burlingham penetrated five hundred miles to the upper reaches of the Banito River and into the jungle country of Borneo. He mingled with the head hunters of Borneo and for months dwelt and slept with the native Dyaks. In his wanderings he had the novel distinction of fraternizing with the famous "Wild Men of Borneo."

Early in April of this year, Mr. Burlingham, accompanied by a Dutch guide and two native interpreters, after equipping his expedition at Sourabaya set out to explore the interior fastnesses. The first part of the journey was made by steamer up the Banito River, and after varied experiences the party reached Moeratewe.

Met Head Hunters
It was here that Mr. Burlingham saw his first head hunters. Two of the wild men were held in prison at the most advanced Dutch settlement, paying the penalty for a wild orgy in which they had been the principal participants. It appears from the explorer's narrative that the natives had organized a feast, and when the celebration began to flag in interest the head hunters came to the conclusion that it was time to introduce some excitement. Accordingly the heads of two of the natives were hacked off, a sort of war dance set in motion, and thereafter developed all the features of a real native carnival.

The head hunters were convicted on the ground of having suggested the beheading ceremony, and were incarcerated in prison at Moeratewe by the Dutch authorities.

Infested with Crocodiles
In navigating the Banito River the Burlingham expedition came across swarms of crocodiles which infest the inland waters of Borneo. Myriads of monkeys were also seen, including the big red monkey, the grey and black varieties and the "Wau Wau." After seeing these monkeys in their native haunts, said Mr. Burlingham, "I shall have sympathy for any monkeys that I see in captivity in future."

Mr. Burlingham says that the monkeys are almost human in their habits, and are playful and tame. They were of the most varied types, and chattered incessantly. The crocodiles that infest the Banito River are ferocious, and the natives frequently fall victims to their voracious appetites.

At Moeratewe the Dutch resident official strongly advised Mr. Burlingham against penetrating into the unknown wilds where danger lurked on every side, not only from the wild animals, but also from the wild tribes of the interior.

Mr. Burlingham, however, was not to be balked by any obstacles, and after restocking his expedition he set out to carry on his explorations into the unknown country.

Animal Life
The dense jungle was infested with wild animal life. Wild boars, panthers, tigers and snakes were in abundance. At night the jungle resounded with the animal noises and the shrieks of wild fowl. Some of the native birds have the most gorgeous plumage that it is possible to conceive.

The natives were very friendly and for weeks Mr. Burlingham mixed on the best of terms with the Dyaks. The houses of the natives are peculiarly constructed, being built of bamboo and perched about fifteen feet in the air on bamboo stilts. Whole families of Dyaks, together with their chickens and other livestock, roost together in these elevated shacks. Mr. Burlingham ate with the natives and slept in their huts. He was never exposed to attack. The Dyaks displayed a great interest in the knives and forks used by the exploring party.

FAVORITE STAR HERE TONIGHT

More than ordinary interest centres around Marguerite Clark's latest Paramount-Aftercraft picture, "Widow by Proxy," to be shown at the Westholme Theatre tonight and tomorrow, because it is the dainty star's first production since becoming acclimated to the new California atmosphere in which she is working. Miss Clark's former photoplays have been made in New York, and it is only recently that she left the metropolis and joined the colony of motion picture stars at Los Angeles.

A large amount of that celebrated California sunshine is reflected in "Widow by Proxy," and it is one of the brightest light comedies in which Miss Clark has yet appeared. The little favorite has the part of a pretty "bachelor girl," who poses as her recently widowed chum in order to win for her the inheritance which the real widow is too proud to claim. Two delightful love stories are woven into the plot, which is crowded with pleasant surprises and a startling climax. It was adapted from the Broadway stage success by the same name and was directed by Walter Edwards. Nigel Barrie is leading man.

LOCAL MEN STOPPED VANCOUVER TRAIN

Albert Davidson and L. K. Shane Had Close Call When Trans-Canada Wrecks Car.

Albert Davidson, formerly G. T. P. ticket agent here and now commercial agent at Vancouver, and L. K. Shane, purchasing agent for the Prince Rupert Dry Dock and Engineering Co., had a narrow escape from death at Vancouver last Thursday. As they were crossing the C. P. R. tracks on Victoria Drive the car which they were driving stalled just as the fier Trans-Canada was coming around the curve. The men were forced to jump from the car to save their lives and the machine was carried about forty feet by the collision, damaging it beyond repair.

and they could never get used to the motion picture camera, although they were perfectly willing to be filmed in "close-ups."

Evil Spirits
The natives still believe in evil spirits, and at night place food on a pole outside the huts to keep away the objects of their superstition.

While in Borneo Mr. Burlingham took 10,000 feet of film and secured most valuable pictures showing the jungle fastnesses and the native life of Borneo.

Floods forced him out of the country, but he proposes again to visit the interior of Borneo and will return to the Far East this Fall. The movie explorer is now on his way to New York.

Filmed Vesuvius
Mr. Burlingham is the camera operator who descended 1,200 feet into the mouth of the volcano Vesuvius just before the Great War, the pictures of which created a great sensation in Europe and the United States.
