DIFFERENT makes of records require different weights. If the weight is not exactly right the tone is inferior and the record will very likely be damaged.

This is one of the reasons behind the invention of the Brunswick Ultona, illustrated above, which by a mere twist of the wrist, is instantly adjusted to all makes of records.

The adjustable weight balance in the Tone Arm gives exactly the right weight required by every make of record. Consequently, with the Brunswick Ultona ALL makes of record are played CORRECTLY and without possibility of injury to any make of record.

No other instrument possesses this invention. It is a Brunswick feature pure and simple. It alone protects you from damaged records, and makes the Brunswick the only true "Universal" phonograph which plays ALL records CORRECTLY.

Call and see this feature for yourself. Hear the superior tone quality it gives. Come—let your ears be the judge!

CROSSED OCEAN RIDING COFFIN

French Convict to New Caledonia
Arrested in Paris After Eighteen Years'
Freedom.

PARIS, July 22.—A convict who escaped in a coffin from the prison of New Caledonia has just been arrested here. His name is Albert Juge, and while a convict he committed a crime which sent him to the disciplinary battalion of Africa, the dreadful "Bibi," where it is said the spirit of even the most hardened apache of Paris is soon broken. Escaping from this military prison, he returned to Paris. Caught on a new charge, he received a sentence of 20 years' hard labor in New Caledonia.

Here he was employed as grave digger. One night he dug up the newly-buried corpse of a comrade and, turning out the body, took the heavy coffin down to the river bank and launched it as a canoe. With a pair of paddles he had made from the lid he pushed off into the unknown, trying to make for Dutch Guiana. The next heard of him was in Buenos Aires where he managed to get hold of false papers, by means of which he actually worked for some time in the house of the French consul at Buenos Aires. From here he proceeded to Paris, where his aged father and mother received him with joy, and for one month he lived with them, never going out in the daylight, and doing the cooking and housework for them. Having left Paris as a man of herculean frame at the age of twenty-seven, no doubt he thought that no one could recognize him at the present day, eighteen years after his last appearance. But in spite of his changed appearance this worn-out, prematurely old and haggard man was seen by an ancient enemy and betrayed to the police.

Soon he will make his second journey—no doubt his last—to the tropical prison whence he had come.

Sport Briefs

Quick action brought about the registration of another player for the Grand Trunk football team at the Prince Rupert yesterday. Harry Bennett was standing near the foot of the gang plank and among the passengers coming off he noticed a former friend of southern football circles. Immediately he broached him on the subject of playing for the railroaders team and gained his consent. A little later Ben Self came up with Johnny Cummings, as the latter knew the man in question, Billy Kerr, but it was too late. A few minutes later Bill Reid, the enthusiastic manager of the Grand Trunk, was seen hustling along the dock with a registration form in his hand looking for "that new centre forward."

Tonight Joe Rochon will pitch his last game of baseball for the Red Sox of Prince Rupert. He is returning to the south as he has resigned from the Mounted Police Force. During his term of play here Joe has come to be a great favorite with all the teams of the league as his genial manner displayed on the field never allowed him to lose his head even when the tide of events was not in his favor. His influence on the Red Sox team has been responsible to a great degree to bringing Slats' nine into the front rank.

A writer in one of the big city newspapers speaks of how much it means to a batter to have confidence when he steps up to the plate in a baseball game. Apparently Ralph Smith was not suffering from any lack of confidence in the Colts vs. Beavers match on Tuesday evening, for the way that he whanged the ball into the safety zones surprised even his friends on his own bench. Ralph was not pitching good ball Tuesday night and dropped a fly in the field, but his excellent hitting made up for any other shortcomings.

The Anyox sport enthusiasts are ready to engage Prince Rupert in a series of baseball games, as well as in football. Likely both teams will come down at the same time if suitable arrangements can be made.

Ben's baseball squad will soon be all made up of star football players. Carrying a few additional members they might well travel with a small troupe and be able to carry off engagements in baseball, football or basketball. In football Clementson or George Corkle could hold down the job between the uprights and the following would hold their places on a field against any good team: Harry Menzie, Vic Menzie, Johnny Cummings, Rosson (who will arrive from the south on Saturday morning), Harry Day, Sid Hardy, Farquhar and Warry Anderson. As for basketball two teams could be picked almost as readily as one.

In order to win the league cup the Grand Trunk team must win from the Sons of England in their scheduled match. There is always the chance that the Gallies will win all their next games and if the railroaders went down one it would be considerably more difficult to decide how the final issue might swing.

Has the Colts baseball team lost its genial sportsmanlike disposition when on the playing field? Apparently the other evening the Colts' bats were safely stowed away when the Beavers came to bat. Is such action necessary in a league in which any of the teams are hardly able to secure all the essential paraphernalia?

George Roberts could hardly be debited with an error for his play on Tuesday evening when he left his sack to catch a fly ball. The second baseman claimed it for him and dropped it. Here was an error. However, he retrieved it in time to have caught the runner if there had been anyone on the sack but George didn't have the time to get back, as he was a good ten feet away from the first mound. In the meantime where was the pitcher?
