NEGRO IN JAIL RESULT OF FIGHT

Thomas Dunn Received Severe Wounds in Affray on Fulton Street Last Night.
Just before the train left this morning the city police were able to locate Ray Anderson, colored, on a dinner car and he was taken to the police station where he will be held in connection with a fighting affray of last night on Fulton Street. The other party to the affair is Thomas Dunn, who is able to be around alright today but is suffering from the effects of twelve wounds which are supposed to have been inflicted by a sharp weapon.
According to the story of Dunn this morning he came in from the Prince Rupert Cannery at 8 last night and after a short time went for a stroll in the city. It was while going up Fulton Street that he was hailed with "Hello Buster" so he stopped to see who was talking as did not like the appellation. The man who accosted him, who was later taken to the Anderson, said that he had been in the American army and Dunn came back with the news that he had served with the Canadian forces. Apparently words got stronger between the two parties and a fight was started. Dunn remembers little after the fight started except that he tried hard to grapple his assailant. He now carries some very bad head wounds and a gash in the back near the region of the kidneys.
Police on Trail.
Constables Wisely and McDonald came on the scene about 1:45 when a phone message came in about the fight. Early this morning they were hot on the track of the man whom they wanted. They were just a little behind him all the time. Four of the members of the police force were down in the yards and it was while going through the diner that Constable noticed something near the floor like a bundle of rags. At first he passed it by but later returned and found Anderson in a bent-up position on the floor of the coach.

PAT BURNS OPTIMISTIC

Says Conditions in British Columbia Most Promising—Claims Meat Situation Relieved.

Pat Burns, Western Canada's "Cattle King," and head of the P. Burns Packing Company, was a visitor to the city yesterday, on one of his customary trips of inspection of his branch departments, says the Victoria Colonist.
"There is no shortage of beef," stated Mr. Burns, who contradicted the recent alarmist reports which spoke of a threatened shortage in the meat supply of the Dominion. Especially in the West conditions are much improved consequent upon more satisfactory feed situation this year. It was quite true, he says, that the drought conditions in the Prairies last summer and the following severe winter occasioned losses of cattle, but the heavy losses were isolated cases, severe in themselves, but by no means general. Many ranchers sold cattle they would otherwise have kept, but they got good prices. In his opinion the total output of meat has not been affected by the past year's condition.
Mr. Burns is an optimist so far as the Western crop situation is concerned. Crops in Alberta are the best he has ever seen, and nothing can prevent the West garnering a record crop this season, as the harvest is now so near that no unfavorable conditions can arise to seriously affect results. He visited the Delta section and the Red River district last Sunday, and there, too, he states, harvest conditions are excellent, with the exception, perhaps, of the area recently flooded through the rising waters of that river.
