YACHTS TOO FRAIL FOR CUP RACING

Lawrence Parry Says the Next
America's Cup Challenger Must Be Strongly Built.

NEW YORK, August 19.—Mr. Lawrence Parry says that whoever next challenges for the America's cup will have to name a wholesome boat if he expects to receive the applause and interest of that section of the yachting fraternity which has little patience with racing machines. The America's cup, emblem of the blue ribbon of the seven seas, should not be permitted to stand as sponsor for speed freaks, for boats that are built to hold together under average conditions—and little more.

The sloops which sailed in the recent cup series were fragile craft. Upon a hull of only 75 feet water line towered between eleven and twelve thousand square feet of canvas with masts that would miss passing under the Brooklyn bridge by many feet. In fact, to be specific, when the Shamrock's club topsail was set the tip was one hundred and thirty-five feet above the deck—the Brooklyn bridge is one hundred and thirty-five feet high. Again, all rigging and gear was as light as dare be made in order to save weight, and the hulls were also pinched in and fragile, not alone to save weight but to beat the rules governing the cup yachts.

Unsafe to Race.

What was the result? The Resolute throughout her racing career had repeated breakdowns and finally lost one of the cup series because of the parting of her throat halyards. Shamrock, even in the light winds which characterized all the races sprung her deck forward, so that it was unsafe to race her in tumbling seas, while on the day Resolute broke down, the challenger sprung her bowsprit and with any wind would have been compelled to drop out herself. And on the one day when there was a real breeze—it was not more than twenty knots—the sloops dared not race. In this there is no reproach against the men on board the two sloops. Their boats were simply not qualified to stand the gale. And so there was no race.

Need Sound Boats.

What we want hereafter—if the sporting aspects are to be taken seriously—are sound boats, schooners, say, that are able to go out to sea and take the best that comes. We have a flair for building schooners in this country and Nicholson, the British designer, has shown in his Margherita that he too can build swift fore-and-afters. So now that the decks are cleared and the two sloops which raced last month are on their way to the junk heap—that is to say, they'll get there sooner or later, being speed machines and nothing else—let us begin with a new deal so far as the America's cup is concerned.

WARNING ISSUED AND LIGHTNING HIT

LA PORTE, Ind., Aug. 19.—"If a bolt of lightning should strike this tent tonight, how many would be ready for it?" Rev. John Timber, an evangelist, said to the meeting of Free Methodists crowding a tent at Springville, six miles south of here, the other night as a storm threatened.

When the services ended and the people were departing lightning knocked down the three ministers on the platform, killing two and seriously injuring the other. Rev. Timber was knocked unconscious, and physicians said he might die.
