PREMIER OLIVER SCORES BIG HIT WITH RUPERT AUDIENCE

the people of the north that two experts were to be sent here to examine the coal and iron deposits of the district and especially those at Copper River.

Sample All Right.

Mr. Bowser had said that the government wharf was a sample of the work of the old administration and, indeed, it was. At the present time it would not carry a heavy load although it had cost $250,000. There was now on the estimates, however, from $60,000 to $80,000 to make it so that it would.

"It has been reported in the south that I am going to seek reelection in the Okanagan or in Prince George," concluded the minister of lands, "but let me tell you that I mean to stand or fall in Prince Rupert and nowhere else. I have fought for northern B. C. and I think I have made good. In fourteen or fifteen months we will have to go to the people and when that time comes I feel that you will say 'Well done, good and faithful servant, continue in the good work.'"

In regard to a query from the audience as to the eight-hour bill Mr. Pattullo stated that this had been taken up at the last session but had been left over as a question for the Dominion to deal with. If this was not done by the next session provincial legislation would, however, be brought down.

Premier Oliver.

Premier Oliver was the next speaker and after the applause had died down, he prefaced his speech with some of his bright witticisms and congratulated the city on its progress since his last visit some three years ago. At that time pessimism prevailed but now optimism was very noticeable. He had visited the scenes of the fishing, lumbering and shipbuilding industries and saw the reason for the optimism. The people must remember that industry and not legislation was the key to prosperity.

The premier referred to the able manner in which Prince Rupert and Omineca were represented and also the worth of the late lamented Frank Mobley, member for Athol.

It appeared that the opposition leader was going around the country giving one set speech to which sufficient local color was added to touch it up. His word had always to be verified and he never did give the public credit for a great deal of common sense.

Civil Service Salaries.

"He alleges that the civil service salaries have been increased by $1,500,000, but I have already challenged him on this, stating that his statements are untrue and cannot be verified. It is true that they have been increased 30 per cent, but the million and a half is simply untrue.

"He also says there are too many motor cars but where he had $4,000 and $5,000 cars for the ministers we provide $570 for our employees and find that the efficiency of the civil service is greatly increased. We find that the supplying of these cars enables the officials to cover more ground and are good economy. We are trying to be an up-to-date government and not so slow as the leader himself is. "Mr. Bowser says that when I was a farmer I used to squeeze a ten cent piece but now that I am premier I am squandering millions like a drunken sailor. There were no millions to spend when he got done though and during his regime expenditure far exceeded revenue. It took them two and a half months after they had been defeated in 1916 to leave office so that they might search the files and erase incriminating traces. When the leader of the opposition left the premier's office he took with him official cablegrams to and from the agent-general at London and despite the demands of the legislature has not returned them. It is my duty to compare the past regime with the present and point out such affairs as the Dominion Trust, scandal, the McKenzie & Mann deals and the Pacific Great Eastern campaign fund. He says that the dead past should bury its dead and I say that that is quite true but that the dead should remain in their graves and not continue an offence to the people of British Columbia."

Financial Situation.

The financial situation was fully gone into by the premier. When he first took office he went to Toronto to float bonds and had been offered a much lower rate than Ontario and told that B.C. bonds were deficiency bonds for expenditure was so much greater than revenue. In eight months, however, he had been able to sell the same bonds at 116 per cent higher rate of interest. Great increases in taxation had been necessary and they had been put on but revenue and expenditure now bore a more satisfactory relation to each other. On account of these increases in taxation three government candidates had been defeated in recent by-elections, however. It was indeed hard to find an equitable basis of taxation.

The colonization question was also dealt with. Where the late administration had allowed millions of acres to get into the hands of speculators, the present government had made conditions so hard for these speculators that they had been forced to colonize or pay 10 per cent taxes. The result was that much valuable land had been opened up and many settlers had been placed under good conditions.

Grand Trunk Railway.

"Your city owes its life to the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, which was conceived by a Liberal Government," stated the premier, "and it was the intention of that government to open a fish industry and a merchant marine with its base at Prince Rupert. But in 1911 that government was supplanted and since that time the one aim has been to kill the Grand Trunk Pacific with the result that Prince Rupert had had eight years of stagnation.

"Prince Rupert occupies a strategic position with the immense valley lands tributary to her and the filling up of these lands is a prime factor of this city's welfare. Do not the Conservatives owe you restitution?"

Pacific Great Eastern.

The premier touched on the expenditures made by the present government, referring to the completion of the Pacific Great Eastern, a road conceived by the old administration in the iniquity of a $500,000 campaign fund, the farmers' loans, the better housing scheme, the Industries Act, and irrigation work.

The P. G. E. extension was referred to, the premier predicting that there would be two roads to the Peace River Valley on either side of that river, one from Hazelton and the other probably from Prince George. The question was dealt with at length and Mr. Oliver told of the plan to get relief from the Alberta government by the laying of rails over a now existing grade until the B.C. road might be completed. In this Mr. Bowser had been forced to concur.

Government's Reforms.

It was the intention of the government to assist in the exploitation of the mines of the province and assist in their proving. Claims were not to remain idle and the policy of the government was one of development.

Referring to the reforms of the present administration, the premier spoke of the passing of the women's franchise, equal wages for women, maintenance of deserted wives, the adoption act, dower's pensions, and the extensions to the compensation act with benefits to widows and children along common sense lines.

His address was closed very quietly and without the usual flourish generally made by public speakers. Cries from the audience to keep going were heard, but the premier wittily replied that "if they were not tired he was getting that way" and sat down amid an upsurge of applause.
