Lakelse, the Place Where People Enjoy Life and Get Health

(An Appreciation by H. F. Pullen)

Away in the country, far from the ordinary haunts of men, among the bears and wild fowl, close to the trout streams and on the banks of one of the most delightful lakes in the country, there is a log cabin where all sorts of people congregate. This place is called Lakelse. In addition to all the attractions mentioned, there is a spring of lithia water almost of boiling heat and this is piped to a bath in the log cabin so that guests may take warm baths ad libitum. Anything from a dozen to twenty paying guests gather there at one time and if you happen to meet any of them, they will tell you that it is the most delightful place they ever visited.

I visited Lakelse recently and a pool such as many men would let me tell you about it. I had pay an immense sum to get. It been to Usk and returned to Terrace on the train, intending to wait until the next day to drive to the lake. However Mrs. E. A. Bayne was going out that afternoon and another man who was suffering from rheumatism was there. We could see them, and anxious to get to the springs. Accordingly we took advantage of an auto-truck that was taking out provisions and rode to the head of the lake, a distance of thirteen miles, near the mouth of Williams Creek. There we found Bruce Johnston, the proprietor of the log cabin hotel, and he took us in a launch about four or five miles to the neighborhood of the hot spring and half a mile overland found us at the hotel. It was a most enjoyable and picturesque trip, even if the road was none too good.

As You Please

Mrs. Bayne with her children and maid were tenting on the lake shore, where the children bathed and fished and enjoyed life like healthy little savages, the natural life out of doors.

At the hotel there is no hurry. You get up when you like, usually just before ten, you bathe when you like, you lunch at two and dine at eight. Between these hours you fish and bathe and fish some more, or perhaps take a tramp through the woods. The launch is pressed into service every day, not only to take people to and from the north end of the lake, but to take out fishing parties, all of which is free of charge to the guests.

The Fishing

We went to the intake of Lakelse Lake one day and a little way down the tortuous stream found
