CANDIDATE IS IN THE FIELD

S. M. Newton Announces Himself as Independent—Others Suggested.

S. M. Newton announces, through his personal organ, that he will be an independent candidate for this riding in the B. C. Legislature. This is the first definite announcement in connection with the elections, although the Trades and Labor Council announced recently that they were considering the advisability of placing a candidate in the field, and in this connection the name of S. D. Macdonald has been mentioned.

It is generally understood that Hon. T. D. Pattullo will again run for this constituency, indeed he practically stated so from the platform at the recent meeting at which the premier spoke.

The Conservatives have been rather busy of late, and when Mr. Bowser was here recently he particularly asked that this constituency return a successful business man. Having this in view the eyes of the community have been turned toward J. A. Kirkpatrick, C. H. Orme and George Tite as possibilities. So far, however, there have been no announcements, and doubtless both Conservatives and Liberals will hold conventions at which their men will be chosen.

It is quite possible that it may be a year or more before the elections are held, and in that case any nominations are rather premature. Still it takes time to go all over this constituency and meet the people.

Dolly Varden Mine Largest on Coast

Is now Shipping Ore Regularly to the Smelter at Anyox and Highgrade to Tacoma; 3,500 feet of Tunnelling

The mine that made Alice Arm famous and that inspires confidence in the future of the mining industry in British Columbia is the famous Dolly Varden silver mine of Alice Arm, B. C. This is the largest silver mine on the coast. It has over four thousand feet of underground workings already and if the lower levels prove as rich as those higher up, the property will prove to be a very valuable one.

The Dolly Varden mine is situated about seventeen and a half miles up the Kitsault River and is 1,700 feet above sea level. It has a series of five tunnels at various levels and these are connected by "raises," the ore being stowed between Number Four Tunnel and the surface. It has in all 3,500 feet of tunnelling and 800 feet of raising.

In July the total output of ore was 5,600 tons, all of which was sent to the smelter at Anyox. In addition to this, however, there was shipped a quantity of high-grade direct to the Tacoma smelter. The shipments, for August have been less than for the previous month owing to the wash-out on the railway, which held up the work considerably. In spite of that, 4,500 tons have been sent down to tidewater. On good days the mine ships 250 tons of ore.

230 Men Employed.

The ore is partly native silver, but mostly argentite and ruby silver. There are 115 men employed at the mine and the same number on the railway and construction work. That is the number employed during the summer and autumn. If the snow gets so deep that the railway is not kept open in the winter, development work will be done and the staff will then be reduced to 65 until spring. It is expected to keep the road open at least until January and probably longer.

The power for the air compressors comes from oil engines, but a hydro-electric plant is being installed at the Wolf mine farther up the river and this will be used for all purposes where power is required. (Continued from Page 2)

Corley Declares Evidence In Liquor Case is False

Defense Declares No Liquor was on Premises at Royal Hotel; Chief Vickers is Called

Evidence for the defence and argument of counsel was heard this morning in the Kenneth McKay liquor selling case and adjournment has been made until September 7, to allow the court stenographer to extend the notes. The Miller case was also called this morning, but was adjourned until tomorrow morning, as W. E. Williams, counsel for the defence, had not time to proceed this morning. Tomorrow morning the S. A. Corley selling case will also come up. The evidence in it will be similar to that submitted in the McKay case.

Edward (Slim) Matson was the first witness for the defence in the McKay hearing. His evidence was that he had spent all the evening of Friday, August 20, out "having a time" with the accused who was alleged to have made the sale in question on that night. He and the accused were quite chummy and spent much of their spare time in each other's company. They had made the round of some of the bars and had then gone down the line. They had returned some time in the morning after midnight. Caruso, the other bartender, had been at the Royal Bar that night. City Solicitor Hooper brought out in cross-examination the evidence that the witness was not clear as to any other time he and the accused had spent together since August 20. He was not even sure of what they had done that night but he was sure that McKay had not been on shift at the Royal bar. He remembered the night in question so well for he had quit two nights before. They had had nothing besides beer to drink in the down town bars and had not had Scotch until later. He was not so very drunk when he returned from "the line."

Corley's Evidence. S. A. Corley, the proprietor of the Royal bar, was the next witness. "The evidence of Smith and Money is absolutely false," he swore in evidence, "in regard to getting booze at the Royal Bar. Caruso was on shift on Friday night. I remember this for on August 17, Zarelli and I dissolved partnership and on the next day "Slim" quit. On the morning of August 19 I woke Caruso up and told him to go to work that morning and Kenny worked that night and the next morning, Friday night and the next morning Caruso worked.

"My instructions were that there was no booze to be allowed in the Royal Hotel and these detectives are swearing a lie. This Wilson's liquor can be got in many places in town. I remember seeing the detective, Money, in Fitz's cigar store, but I cannot swear seeing Smith at any time."

Cross Examined. Cross examined by Mr. Hooper, Corley stated that he had known Caruso since his return from overseas. He had left the bar in charge of McKay on the Monday night following, when he was away for he felt that McKay was an older and more experienced bartender than Caruso and not because he distrusted Caruso. He had not had a bottle like the one in court in the lane behind his premises on or about August 21. He had helped Jim Calderone to order about $1,000 worth of liquor and some of it had been Wilson's. He might even have had some of that kind in his own house.

Dick Caruso was also called and he testified to being on shift in the Royal Bar on the Friday night. A good deal of evidence was taken from this witness in regard to the hours of shift at the bar on which the witness remained quite clear in spite of the cross examination of the prosecutor.

Chief Vickers.

Chief Vickers testified that he had not heard of the Royal selling liquor since the return of Bud Corley from overseas, although it had been reported that it was being sold there while he was away. In the argument for the defence Mr. Patmore maintained that the Royal Bar had always maintained a good reputation under the management of "Bud" Corley and even the police officers had not heard of liquor being sold there while he was there.

Incapable of Belief.

"Knowing that 'Bud' Corley has always lived up to the law even before prohibition times, how is the court going to accept the story of these men, Smith and Money? With the good reputation of this house, are we to believe that Corley would openly deal in liquor as they say? They simply add wholesale to any evidence they may have and make the evidence to suit their cases. (Continued on Page Five.)
