PROPHECY COMES TRUE

Four years ago there appeared in The News a short sob story in verse which had been received by Walter Claxton of this city and answered by him in a series of verses which constituted a prophecy. This prophecy has already partly come true and on that account is very interesting:

THE PESSIMIST.

It hardly pays to be
 In Prince Rupert,
 For there's nothing much to see,
 In Prince Rupert,
 She's a dead one all day long,
 No one sings the latest song,
 Everyone has got in wrong
 In Prince Rupert.

THE PROPHECY.

(Written in Reply)
 I've a hunch that you'd come back,
 To Prince Rupert,
 Asking pardon for your crack
 At Prince Rupert,
 When you meet the mighty throng You'll confess that you did wrong, Sending south your nasty song,
 To Prince Rupert.

After the war you'll meet big men
 In Prince Rupert,
 They will build the depot then,
 In Prince Rupert,
 Stretch the yards along the shore,
 With a hundred tracks or more,
 Finance confidence restore,
 In Prince Rupert.

You will witness train on train,
 In Prince Rupert,
 Bringing in great loads of grain,
 To Prince Rupert,
 Filling up the bowels of ships,
 Safely cable to the slips,
 Where the rail and ocean dips
 In Prince Rupert.

Grain and ore will overflow,
 In Prince Rupert,
 Hammers falling blow on blow,
 In Prince Rupert,
 When the Grand Trunk threesheet crew, Cuts the mountains clean in two,
 Runs a tunnel through and through,
 To Prince Rupert.

All its wonders realize,
 For Prince Rupert,
 Scrapers cleaving to the skies,
 In Prince Rupert,
 Hear the trip-hammers ringing loud
 Where the elevators crowd On we'll still grow very proud Of Prince Rupert.

and soon find their names attached to contract, guaranteeing payment of same (which cannot be cancelled).

Yet one of our most honored societies, the Daughters of the Empire, are estopped from running a simple ten cent game of chance at our fair, where value is rewarded in fun, if not in goods.

Yours for square dealing,
 F. W. CHANDLER.

Henri Defontaine and John Burzi arrived last evening from Terrace with a list of exhibits for the fair.

BLACK MAGIC
BY MASKELYNEFamous Magician Makes Escape in Ten Seconds from Tank in Thames.

LONDON, Sept. 22.—For an hour last Friday afternoon the stretch of the Thames between Blackfriars Bridge and Waterloo Bridge became an adjunct of St.
 George's Hall, and hundreds of Londoners were provided with visible proof that the powers of magic are not limited within the four walls of the building in Langham Place. The occasion was really a duel of wits between the Sea Scouts and Mr. Maskelyne and his assistants, and it must be admitted that on this occasion the Scouts had the worse of the argument.

At Jamboree

The duel between the parties really began during the recent Jamboree at Olympia. On that occasion the Sea Scouts challenged Val Walker, who makes a hobby of escaping from anything that is barred and bolted, to find a way out of a safe of their building. He did so, and was promptly challenged to a far more strenuous test.

"Come to our training ship, the Northampton," said the Sea Scouts, "and release yourself from a prison of which you shall know nothing before you step on board," and again the challenge was accepted. Accordingly, Captain Malzard and Nevil Maskelyne held a reception in the Northampton during the afternoon, and Mr.
 Walker was shown the forbidding task that awaited him.

In a Steel Tank.

The Sea Scouts had prepared a steel watertank capable of holding about 60 gallons of water, with a lid firmly secured by two bolts. In the upper half of the walls air-holes had been driven, and Mr. Walker was informed that after he had been securely imprisoned by the captain of the Northampton he would be lowered into the waters of the Thames, the interior of the tank would be inevitably flooded, and he could then make his escape the best way he could. Mr. Walker promised to do his best, and to the great delight of all the small boys who could find an inch of room on the embankment the preparations began. Mr. Walker estimated that he could release himself from his steel prison in 20 seconds, and time after time the tank was lowered into the river for that period, to make certain that all the Sea Scouts knew which ropes to pull at the critical moment.

Made Escape.

When he was satisfied on this point, he stepped into the tank, the captain of the Northampton screwed home the bolts, and made assurance doubly sure with a spanner. The tank was swung out on a davit and unceremoniously dropped into the Thames.
 Certain it is that Mr. Walker was inside the tank when it was put into the water; equally certain it is that within 10 seconds he had made his escape, and within a minute the tank was being hauled on board again with the bolts still securely in position. The Sea Scouts marvelled greatly; Mr.
 Maskelyne and his friends smiled grimly, and the spectators on shore and on the Northampton cheered lustily.
