The ultimate possibilities of our Great Land Heritage will be realized through the development of our Great Sea Heritage.

IDOL DANCER IS GRIFFITH'S PRODUCTION

Tonight there is a Griffith story at the Westholme, a thrilling love story with a wonderful climax. It is a story of south sea savages with all the wonderful scenic effects of that wonderful region. The play is "The Idol Dancer," a picture that everyone should see. Since time immemorial the churches have been place of refuge. Savages have nearly always respected the sanctity of a place of worship, and only renegades of any color have violated the places pledged to God or the deities of other religions.

Desire to possess the heroine leads a trader to attack the mission on a lovely South Sea Island where all the scenes of the play are situated, and the opportunity is given for her two lovers to prove themselves men.

The Man in the Moon SAYS:

THAT a hunting trip is about the only thing that will get some people out of bed at five o'clock in the morning.

THAT there are few people in Prince Rupert who can throw stones at their neighbors in regard to the time of rising.

THAT a man may make you feel a bit mean after cussing for half an hour, but some women can wither you with half a glance and make you feel worse than Ananias ever felt.

THAT one thing any woman will believe, and that is that she is attractive and good natured. Most of the tribe also think themselves good looking, if not beautiful.

THAT tastes differ in regard to beauty. Now there is Tom . . . but why be specific. You can all quote half a hundred cases of perverted taste in members of the opposite sex.

THAT it is quite correct to love your neighbor as yourself, but for heaven's sake do not give any visible intimation of the fact or there is likely to be trouble in this town.

THAT the latest suggestion as a suitable punishment for the ex-Kaiser is that he should be made king of Ireland.

THAT this is the time of year for the man to write the secretary of the reform league and state that his hens are moulting and showing their shapes in public, and what is she going to do about it.

THAT some people know so many mean things about themselves that they just hate themselves.

THAT some new members of a local society said they would like to ride the goat but the officials could not find the butter.

THAT the very latest thing in shirts is one without any pins that the customer is unable to find.

THAT the fair is on today and we are all having a great time.

THAT if he could only borrow four bits he would take another trip down Seventh Street and have a good time.

ORGANIZER IS VERY HOPEFUL

Says People are Stronger for Prohibition Now Than at Time of Last Vote.

Rev. William Stevenson, organizer for the People's Prohibition party, arrived last night from a visit to Prince George, Smithers, Hazelton and Terrace. He reports the situation very hopeful. Everywhere he went he received assurances of a good deal of support. He thinks this northern country looks much better than it did at the time of the first prohibition vote and in addition there is the women's vote which will go largely for prohibition.

Mr. Stevenson says the great difficulty is that people do not understand the situation. They do not realize what it means to have liquor sold over the counter to all who have the price. Particularly among the businessmen and labor leaders was there opposition to the government selling.

Mr. Stevenson says there is liquor being sold illegally but nothing like the amount people imagine. Publicity is given to infractions of the law with the result that a wrong impression is prevalent. Of course there should be a much better enforcement of the law but the condition, he thinks, is nothing like as bad as it is painted, and certainly nothing like as bad as it was before the previous election.

Mr. Stevenson will be here for several days and will attend the meeting of the prohibition publicity committee this evening at the prohibition hut, formerly the Red Cross hut, Third Ave.
