GOD'S COUNTRY UNDER MORTGAGE

That is What Nurse says of Ireland; Aunt of Mrs. J. F. Maguire Returns

"Poor old Ireland; it is God's country, but the devil has a mortgage on it at present, and I'm glad to get back to God's newer country, the land of my adoption—Canada." Such was the expression of opinion of Nurse J. B. McNamara, who has just returned from the land of her birth, appalled by the throes of rebellion and turmoil therein. She is an aunt of Mrs. J. F. Maguire of this city and of Duncan McNamara of Vanderhoof. Nurse McNamara left Vancouver on March of this year on a six months' tour of the British Isles, and has much interesting data on industrial and economic conditions prevailing.

Irish, American and German propaganda have done their dastardly work effectively; the attitude of the populace being law-defying; every police barracks in the counties of Cork, Waterford, Kilkenny and Queens County being completely destroyed. No policemen would attempt single patrol, groups of three being the order, with similar groups in sight on both sides of thoroughfares. The curfew law, and searching of individuals for arms and ammunition, seizure of the mails, and attacks made on dispatch riders, whose cycles and dispatches are taken from them, are only a few of the incidentals of everyday occurrence. For three weeks transportation to Limerick was cut off completely. No one is allowed at any time to travel on trains or street cars carrying armed equipment.

Need Troops

England evidently does not recognize the fact that Ireland is at war with her, judging by the raw recruit soldiers who are sent over for service, many of them little more than finished schoolboys, undisciplined and inexperienced, entirely unable to cope with the calculated ploys of the Sinn Feiners.

Crowds of idlers throng the principal streets of Dublin, Belfast and other big cities, with evident plentiful supplies of money, etc., to keep them so.

That the faction of rebellion has got beyond the religious and personal is admitted by the clergy, who can do nothing now but accompany and exhort in their endeavor towards restraining violence. The latter step was only taken after a policeman had been shot in the back whilst sprinkling himself with holy water in the vestibule of a church, his body falling forward and his life's blood coloring the consecrated floor.

Plans Go Astray

Nurse McNamara relates the intense excitement attending the narrow escape of Lord French from assassination, when, owing to the train on which he travelled being 10 minutes early, he alighted at a side station and drove direct to the vice-regal lodge, his would-be assassins missing their quarry by expecting that the first auto to leave the main depot would be occupied by their victim, the lieutenant-governor.

A general atmosphere of prosperity reigned throughout Ireland, commodities of every kind being much cheaper than in England or Scotland. In the country districts residents were taking more ambitious interest in their holdings than they did nine years ago, when Nurse McNamara left to make her home in Canada.

Need Protection

That determined effort should be made by the government to protect the loyalists in Ireland, both Protestant and Catholic, is the trend of feeling expressed, many of whose menfolk gave their lives for the cause of freedom. Nurse McNamara's family were well represented in the late war, nine members joining the colors at the first call. Four paid the supreme sacrifice. Three were attached to the Canadian forces and were of the first contingent to leave this country. A nephew, the only son of her sister, Mrs. J. F. Maguire of Prince Rupert, gave his life in the service of the motor boat patrol; another nephew, Duncan McNamara of Vanderhoof, served the entire duration of hostilities and when the armistice was signed had only reached his twenty-first year.

All the nine members of the family were Irish boys, and all joined up at the first call. A close relative occupies the position of deputy lieutenant in Dublin, on almost constant duty in the present reign of sedition, where an officer must be accompanied by a bodyguard of nine soldiers when he enters a bank to draw pay, etc. A cordon of six men line up outside the entrance, while the other three act as escort into and out of the bank premises.

A BRASS BAND FOR DRYDOCK

Greenville Indians Talk of Remaining Here and Playing for Big Plant.

The drydock is to have a band, a big one, and one of the best on the coast. Negotiations have been under way and it is understood are practically consummated for the members of the Greenville Band to work at the drydock and to organize as a drydock band. It is possible too that the present band may be supplemented and one of the finest band organizations on the coast be secured for this city.

There are so many occasions when a band would be useful in the city. An attempt was made some time ago to organize a labor band but the attempt seems to have fallen through, although a considerable sum of money was collected for the new instruments.

Now it seems as if there would be a real live band in town for the winter. It certainly will be welcomed by the citizens who have very much enjoyed the playing of the Indian bands on holiday occasions. The two bands now in town have been giving some fine music and their efforts have been appreciated.
