HOW MINISTER WAS INSULTED

L. Bullock-Webster Writes Regarding Interview with Hon. C. C. Ballantyne at Victoria

"THE RIVET" ROASTS MINISTER OF MARINE

Gives Story from Point of View of Shipbuilding Company; Claims Promises Broken

About two weeks ago there was a story published in the Daily News, an article which told of a meeting in Victoria in which Hon. C. C. Ballantyne is reported to have said that he had been insulted. In reference to this the following letter has been received from L. Bullock-Webster, formerly an alderman here:

Editor, Daily News—I notice on the front page of your issue of September 16th some comments on the meeting of the Victoria Board of Trade at which the Hon. C. C. Ballantyne was present.

The article leaves the impression that Mr. C. J. V. Spratt and Mr. R. Neild insulted the Minister of Marine. That was certainly not the case. Mr. R. Neild was there, I take it, as a strong supporter of Mr. Ballantyne, and his speech was both friendly and favorable to the Minister. Mr. Spratt spoke briefly (toward the end of the meeting), but no one could suggest that he said anything that could be construed as an insult.

Alleged Insults

The alleged insults came from the four members of the soldiers' delegation, which was sent there by the Harbor Marine Veterans. As chairman of that delegation I must assume the responsibility for what occurred and therefore venture to encroach on your valuable space, but will be as brief as possible. The boys in the yard were extremely indignant over Mr. Ballantyne's treatment of their claims for consideration when distributing Government work. A general meeting of the men deputed four of us to go and meet the Minister, and tell him plainly that they considered he had broken his promises. This we did in very plain unvarnished language. There was no rowdiness, no vulgar or objectionable epithets, no disorder. Not one of the delegates used anything but parliamentary language.

Dared to Criticize.

If Mr. Ballantyne felt insulted, as I am told he did, the nature of the insult was that four working men should dare to openly criticize a cabinet minister and the Government, in the presence of a representative body of business men, as though they were addressing an equal, and should have the temerity to point out that they considered he had broken his promise. If we really believe in Canadian Democracy, then there can be no reason why a working man should not speak as frankly to a cabinet minister as he would to one of his co-workers.

L. BULLOCK-WEBSTER.

The following is part of a report of the Victoria meeting as given by "The Rivet," the organ of the Harbor Marine Co.:

"The Hon. C. C. Ballantyne has swept through British Columbia, with trumpets sounding and banners flying.

"His majestic figure has moved in triumphal procession from North to South and South to East. At his approach the fanfares have been sounded. Panegyrics have been written, and his praises sung, by sycophantic obsequious favor-seekers. From Prince Rupert, he travelled by special boat to Victoria. The Stadacona went one thousand miles in his honor. In Rupert they gave him a good luncheon, and said how pleased they were with his policy. But here, alas, occurred the only incident which marred the stately triumph, and, for a moment, shook that solid self-satisfied egotism, which is the shield and outer casing of the cunning little nature, which can plan misleading letters. Some men are so puffed up with the pride of office that they would float, were it not that they are in turn weighed down with an overwhelming sense of their own dignity and importance. And to such the method of approach is on bended knee; their vernacular is the language of flattery. The Hon. C. C. Ballantyne had no time to speak to the boys in the Yard. He did deign, however, to set his stately foot on
