RUSSIAN GOLD FOR NEWSPAPER

Official Account of What Occurred given by Daily Herald, London

In connection with an offer of Russian gold which had actually been handed over to the Daily Herald, the London, Eng., labor paper, but not officially accepted by them the Herald had in a recent number the following explanatory article:

"We are now in a position to make public certain facts which have doubtless given currency to the idea that the Daily Herald has received Bolshevik gold.

"Those facts are that not gold, but an offer of gold has been received by Francis Meynell, who acted absolutely on his own initiative on the matter. That offer has not yet been accepted.

"Yesterday, at the earliest moment available, we informed the trade union debenture holders of the facts and it was agreed to hold a special meeting of debenture holders and the Daily Herald trade union committee with the directors to come to a decision as to the acceptance or otherwise of this generous offer.

"When Francis Meynell was in Esthonia, Finland and Scandinavia in September and October of last year, before the trade unions had begun to invest in the Daily Herald debentures, he discussed on his own initiative with members of the Third International the financial position of the Daily Herald. The question of monetary help in certain contingencies was canvassed. Meynell made it clear in these tentative conversations—

(1) That he was speaking for himself alone; without even the knowledge of his colleagues;

(2) That, before any money from Socialist sources abroad was accepted by the paper the fact would be publicly announced;

(3) That at the outset it must be perfectly clear that in any circumstances the money would have to be a free, unconditional gift without the least influence on policy and without even the remote influence which the possession of even second debenture certificates might be considered to produce; and

(4) That Meynell would himself tender his resignation from the Board of Directors, if and when the money was used, so as to dispel any suspicion that he had come to any private understanding.

Collected Money

"Assent was freely given to all these points; and Meynell took steps—necessarily very slow and spread over many months—to collect the money then agreed upon, namely, £75,000. This was to be held in trust for the Third International and to be offered to the Daily Herald if the need arose.

"This sum is now in Meynell's possession.

"We wish to have the opinion of our readers as to whether we should accept it.

"The only reason against which we consider valid is that it seems pitiable that we should have to accept help from a country which, because of British action, is so impoverished.

"On the other hand the offer is a magnificent demonstration of real working-class solidarity and of what the Russians mean by internationalism. The Daily Herald is not a Communist party paper; its editor, and most of its directors, are not members of the party; yet this offer is made unconditionally. To accept it will be to complete a notable episode in international socialism.

"Finally, the financial position which this money was intended to meet has in fact arisen.

"The ever-increasing costs of production, and the political shyness of advertisers despite our 370,000 circulation, make it necessary for us at once to double the price of the paper without this help."

Offer Refused

The directors of the Daily Herald at a meeting on Monday afternoon decided to refuse the £75,000 offer. Mr. Francis Meynell resigned his seat on the board of the paper and all the other directors have signed a statement that they knew nothing of the matter until it came to Mr. Lansbury's knowledge on September 6.
