FAREWELL, PRINCE RUPERT

By Wm. Craig.

Farewell, Prince Rupert! Ugly duckling of the North!
 I've learned to love thee, and foresee thy worth.
 The silent glamors of the northern clime
 Has wove its spell around, and brands me thine.
 Thy rugged shores, thy hills with snow-tipped crest,
 Thy jewelled sunsets gleaming in the West.
 Thy peaceful eventides, so calm and still,
 That scarce a murmur breathes from hill to hill,
 Endows thee with a beauty all thine own
 That fevered southern cities ne'er have known.

The latent riches of both earth and sea
 Dame Nature in her bounty showered on thee.
 Though jealous Jupiter, to vie the other two,
 O'er much endowed thee with a vaporous dew,
 Thy broad expanse of waterways invite
 The Orient's rich merchandise unite
 And pour its treasures rare upon thy strand
 And reap the harvest of the hinterland.
 In friendly commerce all of these foretell
 No pallid offspring, thou, but virile, well
 Endowed with strength to battle with the great,
 And wrest thy portion from a bounteous plate.

But vulture sister-cities seek thy doom,
 And strive to strangle thee within the womb;
 A craven harlot crew, with jaundiced eye,
 They cannot bear to see prosperity
 Endow thee with its fruits. They cannot view
 With friendly equanimity thy greatness too;
 But cast the poisoned dart from out the bow,
 And strive with might and main to bring thee low.

'Tis thus with humans as with aggregations,
 Whether it be of hamlets, towns or nations,
 They ever strive with jealous, spiteful spleen,
 With treachery and venomous slander mean,
 To shipwreck on the shores of fate, those wise
 Industrious souls who ever strive to rise
 And garner to themselves with proudest thought
 The well-earned fruits of labor dearly bought;
 And safe provision make for future times,
 When age encroaches and the strength declines.

Come what, come may! What does it gain to fret,
 Or be downcast with moody, vain regret?
 A lusty generation hence may gaze
 Upon a gay metropolis in blaze,
 With busy industry and commerce blest,
 And Rupert hold her head among the rest.
 But dire necessities direct my fate;
 And life is very short, I cannot wait.

EASTERN STAR DANCE GREAT

From Every Standpoint It Was Record Success and Was Thoroughly Enjoyed.

The Eastern Star hall held last evening in St. Andrew's hall was a thorough success from every standpoint. There were 225 guests present, every one of whom voted the evening one of the very best on record. The regular program commenced shortly after 9.30 with a very acceptable orchestra consisting of Miss Mabel Adams, A. A. Easson and James Kelly playing the opening numbers. Commencing on time started the affair off well and the annoying feature of waiting with indifferent music until the regular orchestra arrives was entirely eliminated. At 10.30 Gray's Orchestra was in the balcony and continued the regular program.

Every thing seemed to work to the enjoyment of the dancers. The right spirit prevailed, the crowd was congenial and the music was of the best, so from the very first dance enjoyment was keen. Commencing at midnight, refreshments of a high quality were served to three sittings and many extras were played while the guests were being served.

When all had finished and were back in the hall, the second half was commenced and it was three o'clock when the Home Wail was played. Even then some of the guests regretted the breaking up. Great credit is due the committees and management for the fine manner in which things were conducted and the fine time that was provided. The hall was tastefully decorated with the insignia of the Eastern Star order.

Mrs. Carmichael, matron of the order, was energetic in all arrangements and Mrs. T. Spencer was convener of the committees. Assisting Mrs. Spencer on the general committee was Miss Lily Scott, Mrs. R. Blance and A. Finnie, while all the ladies assisted in the provision of refreshments.

The decoration committee consisted of J. Vigor, W. G. Barrie, Mr. and Mrs. J. Carmichael, Mrs. Shepherd and Mr. Ray, E. R. Tabrum made a capable master of ceremonies and W. G. Barrie, J. Carmichael and A. Finnie were on the door.

SEASON'S WHALING

VICTORIA, Nov. 19.—The Consolidated Whaling Corporation will not give out official figures regarding the season's catch of whales, but the following statistics are understood to be substantially correct:

Station	Whales
Naden Harbor	188
Rose Harbor	156
Kyuquot	145
Akutau (Alaska)	286
Westport (Oregon)	186

Total 961
 Catch for 1919 1020
 Catch for 1918 999

The steamer Blue, Captain John Anderson, has the greatest number of whales to her credit, having killed 92. The Grant, Captain Heater, was the runner-up.
