BUSY TIME IN COUNTY COURT

Number of Criminal Cases Pile Up while Judge Young is Away—Jailbreaking Interesting

Judge Young commenced hearing of various criminal charges in the county court yesterday afternoon that have arisen during his absence and all the accused elected and those choosing speedy trial pleaded.

Five folk charged with forgery were represented by W. H. Johnson. Speedy trial was elected and the case has been adjourned until December 10. In the meantime the relatives of the accused in North Dakota will be communicated with.

Theft Charge

John A. Hume, of Anyox, charged with theft, pleaded guilty and put up a straightforward story of the circumstances which evidently found the sympathy of the judge. He had been intoxicated and had gone to the house of Mildred Harris and in search for further liquor had taken a muff and other of her possessions in his drunkenness. The first cognizance he had that he had stolen was when he woke up outside his boarding house and found he had the things. Some of the articles he attempted to conceal, but Constable Dryden had arrested him a couple of days later. Accused explained his business and circumstances satisfactorily and said that he had sent $400 to his parents since the first of the year.

Reports of his good character also came from Anyox and sentence is suspended until some of the statements of the accused can be checked up. The judge showed him every sympathy and the lad, himself, was frank enough.

Stealing Overcoat

Jack Thorsen, charged with stealing an overcoat from D. Seguin, elected speedy trial and pleaded not guilty. The case is being proceeded with this afternoon. Mr. Seguin not being in court yesterday to give testimony.

Interest centers round the trials of S. Verino, S. Wintonack, Harry Ross and Joe Aurio on various charges.

Verino and Aurio pleaded guilty to the charge of stealing a Winchester rifle, automatic revolver, sack of flour, sack of oatmeal and a blanket from the shack of F. Lawson at the end of Eleventh Avenue.

Asked to account for the theft, Verino said in a surly manner that they had been hungry and had to eat or lie down and die. They were escaped prisoners and that was the only way to get food. Verino said he had worked at the dry dock all summer and had quit a month before the shut down. Since he had spent all his money "having a good time."

Government's Fault

Aurio with some heat said he was a returned man and the government had not treated him right. He could not get a job and had to steal. During the summer he had worked at Port Edward and paid off his debts. It was the government's fault that he had been led to steal.

Judge Young was not sympathetic in his comments on the case. There was no justification for the thefts! Now they were sitting before him and had not thought at the time they stole that they might have been stealing from people just as unfortunate as themselves.

Harry Ross and Verino then came up and were charged with having the stolen goods from the cemetery in their possession. Verino elected speedy trial and pleaded not guilty, while Ross elected for jury trial. As the assizes do not sit here again before next March, Ross will have a long wait for trial. He is now under sentence of eight months for supplying liquor to Indians and jail breaking.

The jail breaking charges were then called. Verino and Wintonack pleaded guilty and were remanded for sentence.

"If you build a jail of mosquito netting—" began young Wintonack in a bold voice.

"Guilty or not guilty?" interrupted the judge.

"Guilty," caustically from the boy.

Just Left

Ross elected for jury trial on this charge while Aurio pleaded not guilty. In the latter case Sergeant Adams and Warden Bailey gave evidence, telling of the escape and the capture. Aurio went in the box and told that he had not broken jail but had been awakened in his cell and heard that Ross, Verino and Wintonack had gone. He just went to the hole and left and subsequently met Verino on the track. Verino had induced him to make the theft at Eleventh Avenue.

The judge noted that he had admitted breaking jail for, technically, one did not have to kick a door out or break down a wall. Leaving lawful custody constituted the same offence. Aurio will come back for sentence on this charge with Verino and Wintonack.

Returned Soldiers

When casting your ballots in the Provincial election on December 1st, remember that the Oliver Government has done more to assist in re-establishing veterans of the Great War, than any other Government in Canada. IT IS DESERVING OF YOUR SUPPORT.

Your Comrades say:

At the annual meeting of the Dominion Army and Navy Veterans Association on October 12th, 1920, Delegate Young of Victoria said: "Outlining legislation that has been enacted in British Columbia for the benefit of ex-service men, they are satisfied now." At a meeting addressed by Premier Oliver at Revelstoke in October, 1920, Dr. Hamilton, president of the Revelstoke Branch of the G. W. V. A., tendered the Premier the hearty appreciation of the returned veterans for the Government's valued assistance. He assured Mr. Oliver that the returned men were in full accord with the Government's attitude toward them.

Mr. Gielma, M.L.A., soldier member for Victoria, speaking in the House, February, 1920, said in referring to the resolution passed by the legislature last year, whereby the House went on record as favoring preference to returned men in Provincial appointments, that the Government, he considered, had honorably carried out the spirit of that resolution.

Capt. Ian Mackenzie says:

British Columbia is pointed to by veterans throughout the Dominion as the home of the best legislation in the country affecting the heroes of the war.

Fault finders among the opposition who vaguely refer to "a square deal" for returned men, but offer no constructive policy, only point to one instance where, in their opinion, reason for dissatisfaction could be established.

The Government at Victoria that already has given you a square deal and a practical re-establishment policy is the one that you will naturally continue.
