Whose Boy Was It
They Buried in London?

Yesterday we published a picture of the Genotaph in memory of the unknown warrior who was buried in London. Let Sir Philip Gibbs tell his story:

It did not seem an Unknown Warrior whose body came on a gun-carriage down Whitehall where we were waiting for him. He was known to us all. It was one of "our boys"—not warriors—as we called them in the days of darkness lit by faith.

To some women, weeping a little in the crowd after an all-night vigil, he was their own boy who went missing one day and was never found till now, though their souls went searching for him through dreadful places in the night. To many men among those packed densely on each side of an empty street, wearing ribbons and badges on civil clothes, he was a familiar figure, one of their comrades, the one they liked best, perhaps, in the old crowd who went into the fields of death and stayed there with great companionship.

It was the steel helmet—the old "tin hat"—lying there on the crimson of the flag, which revealed him instantly, not as a mythical warrior, aloof from common humanity, a shadowy type of national pride and martial glory, but as one of those fellows dressed in the drab of khaki, stained by mud and grease, who went into the dirty ditches with this steel hat on his head, and in his heart the unspoken things which made him one of us in courage and in fear, with some kind of faith, not clear, full of perplexities, often dim, in the watchwords of those years of war.

Great Folk There
To Do Homage

So it seemed to me at least, as I looked down Whitehall and listened to the music which told us that the Unknown was coming down the road. A band was playing the old Dead March in "Saul" with heavy drumming, but as yet the roadway was clear where it led up to that altar of sacrifice, as it looked, covered by two flags hanging in long folds of scarlet and white.

About that altar—the Genotaph—there were little groups of strange people, all waiting for the dead warrior. Why were they there, these people? They were great folk to greet the dust of a simple soldier! There were the Archbishop of Canterbury and the Bishop of London and other clergy in gowns and hoods. What had they to do with the body of a soldier who had gone trudging through the mud and muck like one ant in a legion of ants, unknown to fame, not more heroic, perhaps, than all the pals about him, not missed much when he fell dead between tangled wire and shell holes?

There were great generals and admirals, Lord Haig himself, the Commander-in-Chief of our armies in France, and Admiral Lord Beatty, who held the seas, Lord French of Ypres, with Horne of the First Army, and Byng of the Third, and Air-Marshal Trenchard, who commanded all the birds that flew above the lines on mornings of enormous battle.

These were the High Powers, infinitely remote, perhaps, in the imagination of the man whose dust was now being brought towards them. It was their brains that had directed his movements down long roads which galled his feet, over ground churned up by gunfire, up duck boards from which he slipped under his heavy pack—if he were a foot slogger—and, whatever his class as a soldier, ordained at last the end of his journey, which finished in a grave marked by a metal disc.

Princes of the World
Bowed to the Unknown.

In life he had looked upon these generals as terrifying in their power "for the likes of him." Sometimes, perhaps, he had saluted them as they rode past. Now they stood in Whitehall to salute him, to keep silence in his presence, to render him a homage more wonderful, with deeper reverence, than any general of them all has had.

There were princes there about the Genotaph, not only of England, but of the Indian Empire. These Indian Rajahs, that old white bearded, white turbaned man, with the face of an Eastern prophet. Was it possible that they too were out to pay homage to an unknown British soldier, who for all we may guess, and who (in our hearts we know) was just one of "the boys" from some little home in a back street somewhere, put through the hard discipline of a home camp, sent out as a draft to fill up a gap, billeted in rat-crowded huts, marched up to the water-logged trenches, told to "stand-to" on the fire-step, ordered over the top, and but one lost unit in that great mass of khaki which fell like autumn leaves in Flanders fields.

 "For over three years, I was confined to bed with Rheumatism. I treated with doctors, and tried nearly everything without benefit. Finally, I tried 'Fruit-a-lives'. Before I had used half a box I saw improvement; the pain was easier and the swelling started to go down. I continued taking this fruit medicine, improving all the time, and now I can walk about two miles and do light chores about the place".

PRINCE RUPERT TIDES

Thursday, December 9.

High, 0:55 a.m., 18.7 feet.
 12:34 p.m., 21.2 feet.

Low, 6:40 a.m., 8.8 feet.
 19:23 p.m., 3.8 feet.

Friday, December 10.

High, 1:34 a.m., 19 feet.
 13:14 p.m., 21.3 feet.

Low, 7:47 a.m., 8.7 feet.
 19:57 p.m., 3.7 feet.

The time used is Pacific Standard, for the 120th Meridian west. It is counted from 0 to 24 hours from midnight to midnight.

The table given is for Port Simpson but the time for Prince Rupert varies only a few minutes on some days and on others is the same. The range of the tide may be computed as 5 per cent greater at Prince Rupert than at Port Simpson both at springs and neaps. Therefore the rise in the Prince Rupert harbor is slightly greater than Port Simpson.

The height is in feet and tenths of feet above the average level of lower low water.

ACCUSED OF MURDER
TAKES FIRST RIDE
IN AN AUTOMOBILE

KINGSTON, Dec. 9.—James Young, a farmer of Kaledon Township in the county of Lennox and Addington, arrested in connection with the death of his wife, whose charred remains were found in the cellar of his home following a fire, took his first ride in a motor car when transported to the jail at Nanawau. Noticing a German cannon, a war trophy awarded the town, Young inquired what it was. The information apparently conveyed little to him.

"Didn't you hear about the war?" asked the Provincial police officer.

Young replied that he had "heard some of the fellows talking about it a while back, but didn't pay much attention."

FAMINE IN EUROPE

Editor Daily News.—The Christmas season is at hand. It is a time when people are controlled by spirit of kindness, of charity and of sacrifice. That is what Christmas means. If ever selfishness should be banished, it certainly should be at Christmas. The keynote of the season is "Peace on earth, goodwill to men."

There is great suffering in Central and East Europe at the present time. Pestilence and famine are raging in that part of the world. The children are hungry and calling out for bread. They are dying from starvation and disease by the thousands. Is it right that the people of North America and other parts of the world who know nothing about famine conditions as they exist in Europe should be unconcerned about the misery of those poor people? Does it not seem that there is a clarion call ringing out to all people who have a little to spare, to come forward at this generous season to relieve suffering where it exists in its most dreadful form?

Our own country, Canada, rejoices this year in that she has harvested the second best wheat crop in ten years. United States is in a similar position with abundance of wheat and corn. Both of these countries can spare many shiploads of flour to starving Central and Eastern Europe without feeling it. If every man, woman and child in Canada does a little it will go a long way to help those people. Surely we cannot enjoy our own Christmas with the knowledge of millions crying for food not so very far from our door.

If every city in Canada and every large country community would make an effort during the present month to see how much flour they could spare to those unfortunate people, I have no doubt Canada could raise a sufficient amount to send several shiploads—"Santa Claus" ships—across the Atlantic. It would be one of the noblest works ever done by any country.

 Ald. J. H. Hilditch expressed his alarm at last night's council meeting at the number of Chinese laundries that are springing up in the city.

J. H. Pillsbury is gone to Vancouver where he will meet Mrs. Pillsbury and family who have been visiting for some time in the Eastern States. They will reside in the Butler residence on Fourth Avenue East on their return.

Vernon F. Gamble, of Harrison & Gamble, is leaving shortly for a three month's visit in Europe in the interests of his firm.

Owing to the slowness of some people in paying telephone tolls it has been decided by the council to adopt the one month in advance system.

For holding up Honest John Oliver two weeks ago in New Westminster man who gave the name of Reuter to the police has been sentenced to five years in the penitentiary with twenty-four lashes. The accused said he was only asking alms, but the evidence was such that the court did not give credence to the story.
