BRINGING UP FATHER

DEAN INGE ON GROUP MIND

Speaks Before Eugenics Education Society; Authority Spurned says Speaker

Addressing the Eugenics Education Society at Wigmore Hall, London, Dean Inge said that members of the eugenics movement were initiating a crusade against the real causes of half the ills which afflicted mankind, but they were still looking upon many quarters as unpractical cranks who wished to interfere with the right of every man and woman to choose a mate. The enemy of eugenics was the anti-scientific temper. At the present time there was a general revolt against the dictatorship of science. There was a great re-emergence of superstition. People were no longer ashamed to believe what they wanted to believe. In politics the anti-scientific temper was rampant. The revolution which more than a hundred years ago guillotined Lavoisier, "having no need of chemists," was now proclaiming it had no need of "intellectuals" of any kind. "The vogue of irrationalists and emotionalists like Benjamin Kidd and Gilbert Chesterton shows what the reading public likes," said the Dean.

"The trained mind finds it difficult to realize how utterly confused are the springs of action of the majority—how self interests, and prejudice, and mob contagion, and sentiment, and the wish to believe are combined in an irrational jumble, out of which emerges a something which psychologists dignify by the name of the 'group mind,' but which is really an undisciplined and unsifted bundle of emotions and prejudices, gathering by preference sneer en masse nodutti—pfeence round a sentiment rather than an idea. Such is the mentality of the average man who, strong in his numbers, spurns all authority and treats the warnings of science with contempt."

Nineteenth Century England, the Dean proceeded, was a going concern. Post-war England was a zone of concern. The goose that laid the golden eggs was having its throat cut at this moment. There must before long be a thinly disguised repudiation of the scraps of paper on which the nation's debts of honor are inscribed.

BIG MOONSHINE OUTFIT FOUND

Alleged Moonshine Joint is Discovered at Juneau—One Man is Placed Under Arrest

Fire caused by an explosion of gasoline and which ignited alcohol, not only resulted in the discovery of one of what is claimed to be one of the largest stills yet located in Alaska, but also resulted in the arrest of the alleged "moonshiner," says the Juneau Empire.

The fire was in the old Sharick house, a two-story residence, on Gastineau Avenue, up the hill about half a block. The man arrested was John Edwards, better known as "Frozen Foot Johnson."

Big Explosion
Edwards, or Johnson, did not turn in the alarm, for various reasons, but the fire call was made by others who heard the explosion, which shook the hillside, and who saw the smoke issuing from the windows which had been broken by the explosion.

The Fire Department members were quickly on the scene and with chemicals extinguished the fire which was burning in the ceiling of the room where it originated and where it had gradually spread to the roof of the house. Burning alcohol was stubbornly fought, this fluid having been scattered about the room according to the firemen as the result of the explosion.

Chief of Police T. E. P. Keegan arrived at the house shortly after the fire boys had begun work and placed Edwards under arrest. He was then turned over to Deputy United States Marshal W. R. Garster who reached the house shortly after Edwards' arrest was made.

Squealed Itself
Chief Keegan made the complaint which charged "operating a still and having liquor in one's possession."

Edwards was taken to the Federal jail. He received slight burns about the face and arms and his hair was singed in many places. He refused the jailer's request to summon a doctor.

The "still," which consisted of two large tanks, containing mash, various arrangements of coils, etc., together with three barrels of mash, was taken to the Federal jail storehouse under direction of Deputy U. S. Marshal N. O. Hardy.

Chief of Police Keegan stated that he and Federal authorities had been keeping a watch on the locality where the fire occurred for several weeks, but that the alleged moonshine joint squealed on itself.

When the court of revision on the municipal voters' list sat, the name of Percy Webster was ordered struck off the list as it was understood he was deceased. However, M. M. Stephens, his local agent, says that Mr. Webster is, rather, resident in England.
