DAILY EDITION. Tuesday, January 13, 1920.

The Modern Woman And Masculine Habits.

Women today are doing many things that their mothers never did—things at which their grandmothers would be shocked. It is something to be thankful for that the era of false modesty which characterised the Victorian period is just about passed out, although its flavor still lingers in some sections of the older fashioned generation.

To Preserve the Health And Sanity of the Race.

The staid fathers and mothers of St. Catharines in Ontario are sorely distressed, according to recent word from that place. The whole city has gone dancing mad. Every night in the week in that happy town there is some dance or other got up by the various clubs and organizations and the young people—and not they alone either—are scarcely ever a night at home.

Taking the Pep Out of Elections.

Time was when an election meant something. Nowadays it hardly causes a ripple of the placid surface of the city's daily activities. Time was when the policies of the different candidates would be discussed by practically every voter.
