Archbishop on Mental Healing.

It is estimated that nearly three quarters of the ailments which afflict mankind have a mental cause. This should indicate at once the importance of a mental remedy.

The first principle to firmly grasp is the close inter-relationship of the mind and body. What influences the mind affects the body, and what affects the body influences the mind.

A suggestion in the mind, which is something purely mental becomes an impression upon the brain, which is something partly physical, and this impression upon the brain at the centre of the nervous system is quickly spread through a net-work of nerves throughout the whole body to its remotest parts.

The second principle to firmly grasp is the intimate connection between physical vitality and spiritual life. Divine energy flowing into the human soul has a quickening power.

Fundamental Principles Go Together.

These two fundamental principles must be taken together. The laws of the human mind are the laws of God. Spiritual healing is through a mental process and a psychic channel, reasonable because human, powerful because divine.

A suggestion is given to a man as he eats his dinner which throws him into a violent fit of anger. This upsets his nervous system, spoils his digestion, and consequently poisons his blood.

When we say that this man's ailment has a mental cause we do not mean that the ailment only exists in his mind. Far from it. His mind has undoubtedly affected his body, and it is probably true that some physical remedy which will assist nature may be of some benefit to him in getting rid of his indigestion. We do not advocate the doing away with all medicine. Such has a secondary place to fill, but no medicine can impart the spirit of life. If any ailment has had a mental cause, it is unscientific not to go to the root of the matter.

Mental Remedy for Mental Ailment.

There are a vast number of ailments caused by worry, which is a mental cause. For such it is absurd to take only physical pills. Why not try a mental remedy; "casting all your anxiety upon God for He cares for you?" The mind that is stayed upon God will be kept in perfect peace. The peace of God in the soul of man is the most powerful prophylactic known to medical science.

It is well known that many distressing causes of chronic infirmity are caused by a persistent idea which has dropped into the subconscious region of the mind of the afflicted, and from this secret recess affects the whole nervous system. It is useless to simply argue with such a patient, and harp like a parrot upon the words—"You are not ill." What is required is careful treatment by one specially trained in psychology and religion, a skilled physician or a sympathetic clergyman, who will first win the confidence of the patient and by quiet questioning discover the hidden idea which is the cause of all the trouble, and then gently eradicate this tyrannical idea by using a counter-suggestion, a divine idea, which will take its place and become the inspiration of a new life. The Spirit of Life in Christ Jesus has still its quickening power. "Arise and walk, thy faith has made thee whole."

We need today not the bungling attempts of novices, but the scientific application of the principles of psychotherapy, with a full recognition of the healing power of the life of God in the soul of man.

F. H. DU VERNET, Archbishop of Caledonia.
