SAVE YOUR SIGHT

YESIGHT—The most valuable of all the senses—is the most neglected and the least understood. It suffers from illis, which, upon examination, can be traced directly to defective eyesight.

The removal of the cause will often restore the delicate and worn-down sufferer to robust health. When glasses are properly prescribed they restore the vision to normal and eliminate all eye strain.

AID SOLDIERS WITH TAXES

Government Working on Scheme For Dealing With Burden-some Arrears.

VICTORIA, March 11.—Returned soldiers and their dependents in British Columbia will learn with considerable interest that the provincial government has decided to extend the scope and operation of the Returned Soldiers' Aid Commission so as to comprehend the needs of those eligible beneficiaries whose tax arrears may be threatening to separate them from their property by the ordinary process of distress. While there has been no definite provision of a stipulated or set character of assistance the Commission has performed an excellent work in an unostentatious manner, and many returned men have been aided during the stage of waiting for gratuity or other allowances from the federal department.

This new and specific development, however, has been more or less occasioned by the discussion which took place in the Legislature recently in connection with a resolution sponsored by J. H. Hawthornthwaite, Socialist member for Newcastle, which sought to place upon the Government the onus for perpetuating the obligation of many returned soldiers who are in arrears with their municipal taxes. To be precise the terms of the resolution condemned the Government for working a hardship upon those veterans so circumstanced. Likewise its design was directed upon a specific line of action and called upon the Government to exempt from taxation all property of returned men assessed under and up to a value of two thousand dollars for the period of the war, and to rebate those taxes that had been paid within the same period.

Hard on Municipalities.
 While this suggestion on the part of the Newcastle member would naturally appeal to many returned men so placed as to come within its meaning, it was obvious at the outset that the spirit and intent of the suggestion were totally out of harmony with the ability of the Legislature to acquiesce. In the first place, and as pointed out by the Premier during the discussion which ensued, the resolution in its entirety bristled with inequalities. And in the second place the power of exemption or rebate in respect of municipal taxes does not rest with the Government at all. Its function in this particular regard is concerned solely with the administration of the law as it stands and the power to do what the resolution asks rests exclusively with the municipalities.

Until the Municipal Act is changed, therefore, the province—and by that is meant the Legislature—should not interfere save and except under the request of a majority of the municipalities.

Statistics issued from time to time have gone to show that nearly ninety per cent of tax arrears involve the municipalities or the organized sections of the province and in consequence the issue embodied in the resolution is rightly one for municipal and not governmental action at this time. Emphasis is unnecessary in pointing out the difficulties in which many of the municipalities in the province find themselves today, while the Premier took the stand on the floor of the House that were it even possible for the legislature to follow the course prescribed by the resolution the additional burden that would be placed upon the municipalities would provoke financial calamity in many cases.

Inequality of Plan.
 These are general arguments against the wisdom of the resolution. There is a phase, however, which reports have it, has escaped the majority of returned soldiers and the general public. It is the inequality that such a proposal would create were it to become operative. Premier Oliver illustrated the case of the returned soldier who might chance to possess a dwelling assessed at $2,000, and upon which all his taxes were paid. Under the Hawthornthwaite proposal this man, probably quite well off, would be entitled to a refund of all taxes paid by him during the whole period of the war. Moreover, in the case of the soldier or dependent in possession of a house assessed at, say $2,500, upon which three or four years' taxes might be in arrears—with a possible mortgage encumbrance of three-fourths its value—would get no benefit whatsoever under the Hawthornthwaite plan of relief although this man or dependent might be very much more in need of the assistance than the man whose five years' of taxes would be remitted. Nor would any accommodation accrue to the soldier's widow who is a virtual taxpayer through the medium of her monthly rental paid for the house she does not own.

Will Find Relief.
 These are the anomalies which Premier Oliver recruited in support of his objection to the principle of the resolution. And in making his request to the Newcastle member for its withdrawal because of its inequalities and impracticability, Mr. Oliver informed the House that some plan would be evolved before the end of the session whereby assistance would be given to those returned men who are suffering under the discomfort of tax arrears. Towards this end, therefore, it may now be taken for granted that the scope of the Returned Soldiers' Aid Commission will be extended and in future will comprehend all cases of necessity among returned soldiers and their dependents, whether the trouble be tax arrears or such ordinary and regrettably frequent cases of misfortune as come within the sympathetic and practical purview of this excellent provincial rehabilitation agency.
