TIMBER POLICY OF GOVERNMENT

Matter of Log Export Recently
Before Legislature Is Explained.

VICTORIA, April 6.—When the Hon. T. D. Pattullo, minister of lands, introduced his amendment to the Forest Act he did so with the knowledge that he was making provision for the continuation of a policy already in operation in connection with the exportation of logs from this province. In moving the second reading of the bill he took occasion to point out to the House that the amendment in question represented the considered judgment of those most vitally interested in the lumber industry, whose concern, however, comprehended the safeguarding of a fundamental industrial asset to British Columbia.

Opposition Efforts.
Opposition members promptly took the view that the minister of lands virtually had delivered the logs of this province to American interests who would proceed to denude the forests of this part of the country for the benefit of allied manufacturers on the other side of the international boundary. Not a little heat was displayed by the leader of the opposition and the member for Fort George—former minister of lands in the late regime—and repeated efforts were made to coin campaign material out of the fact that the minister in charge of the bill saw no reason to change the time limit from ten years to one.

In a further explanation, however, the minister of lands made it perfectly clear that the amendment has for its sole object the cure for certain conditions which are bound to develop from time to time as long as British Columbia possesses a logging industry. The term of years is of no special significance for the simple reason that in the event of conditions arising demanding a rigid prohibitory regulation, action would be taken by the Government immediately.

Home Manufacture.
To sum up the situation it may be taken for granted that the Government's policy is one of home manufacture and maximum protection of the manufactured article. Not a stick of timber is allowed for exportation if it can be utilized in this province. What is exported, the minister points out, comes either from crown granted lands—over which the province has no control whatever—or is "by product" material cut during the progress of logging operations and not saleable in the British Columbia market.

It must be remembered that there are times when it would be pure waste for a logger to leave good hemlock when he is taking out fir and cedar. At the same time the B. C. market for hemlock might be glutted with logs unsaleable here; the spectacle of a rotting boom is not unknown. Export in such an emergency means the salvage of valuable material and money for the province that otherwise would be lost.

Pattullo Interviewed.
Discussing the amendment with your correspondent after its passage through the Legislature Mr. Pattullo observed as follows:

"The occasional export of logs is merely a safety valve to save waste. It is regulated with the greatest care and both the manufacturing and logging industries co-operate with the Department of Lands in seeing that no export is ever allowed which in the slightest degree works against home manufacture of the natural resources of our province. How little the amount of export even of the 'by-product' material referred to above is shown by the figures for the past year: Logs scaled, 1,214,000,000 feet; allowed to be exported, 10,000,000 feet, which does not even amount to one per cent of the logs cut.

"The effect on the market in British Columbia, the manufacturing industry and the consuming public is thus obviously negligible.

"In 1915 under the last administration there was allowed to be exported some seventy-six million feet to relieve the congestion of logs then on the market. Export continued without restraint until the present machinery for the strict regulation of export was established just two years ago. It has worked most successfully both in the interests of the public and the important industries concerned, and the amendment merely provides for the continuance of a system already tested by results."
