STAKE SILVER BY INSTRUMENT

Ontario Man Says He Can Locate Mineral Deposits Without Digging.

ELK LAKE, Ont., April 12.—A deal of extremely peculiar interest has just been closed for a group of mining claims in the Gowganda district. The four claims involved are situated over one mile south from the Milner Lake O'Brien Mine, the owners being Andrew Cullen, Peter Ferland, of Haileybury, and F. Thomson of Gowganda.

Staked Last Fall.

The property was staked last fall on the strength of claims made by Mr. Cullen that by use of an instrument constructed on the principle that two things of a like nature attract each other and that by use of this instrument he received a "strong pull" which showed the presence of silver on the properties in question. In fact, Mr. Cullen declares that he is confident that the extension of the rich Milner Lake O'Brien passes on to the property; mining men are entirely skeptical. They point to the fact that such dreams have rankled the minds of men since time immortal, not the least of these has been the crocheted stick or wand with which the dreamers claimed they could with ease locate the presence of water courses beneath the earth's surface, divining rods, affinity instruments or the willow twig have in the past failed to bring to light anything but a lesson to shy clear of them when anything but mere curiosity was involved. They have since the beginning been in the hands of clever operators, in fact, it is to this that may be attributed the pleasure of deception which they were able to temporarily establish.

Will Explore Property.

In Toronto a few days ago, Mr. Cullen was able to lead some people to believe that his instrument might be the exception, accordingly R. Henderson and his associate have entered into an option agreement to explore the Cullen, Ferland, Thompson property, the ultimate price amounting to $300,000, payable only provided ore is discovered. It is stated that work will commence just as soon as the snow goes and that a shaft will be put down at the point decided by Mr. Cullen. As to this, however, it is disappointing to learn that while able to locate the presence of the ore Mr. Cullen cannot state how deep it is. It is just at this point that science appears to refute the claim. For instance, by standing, say, 500 feet to one side of the point directly above the alleged ore deposit and mapping the direction of the "pull," thence going to an equal distance on the opposite side of the deposit and lining up the direction of the pull it should be possible to establish the exact location of the deposit. This would eliminate any chance for the use of the excuse that should the shaft fail to find ore, that such was due to not going deep enough.
