WILL TRY TO RAISE PRINCESS SOPHIA

Crew of Men Gone North to Make Preparations for the Work.

A crew of men has gone north to prepare for the attempt to raise the Princess Sophia from Vanderbilt Reef, Lynn Canal, this year. The Deep Sea Salvage Company, of Seattle, has undertaken the task, and last year gathered equipment near the wreck for an attempt.

The Deep Sea Salvage Company claims that it will also investigate the chances of raising the Islander, which sank near Juneau with gold bullion aboard.

Apparatus for raising the Sophia has been designed by a Seattle house-mover. It consists of two scows joined by a bridgework from which cables will go down to the wreck. The high tides are expected to give the necessary lift once the cables are tightened around the hull. A series of lifts of this kind would allow the wreck to be moved into shallow water near shore and there repaired.
