DAILY EDITION.  Saturday, April 24, 1920.

Canadian Book by Canadian Writer.

A Canadian book by a Canadian writer, that is not only interesting from cover to cover, but contains bits of philosophy here and there which make it of value even beyond its story interest. That book is the "Cow Puncher" written by Robert J. C. Stead. It gives pictures of some phases of Canadian life that are true. As an example of its philosophy one of the characters is made to say: "I am disposed to think that many a philanthropist, if weighed in the balance would be found to have a debit side bigger than the credit. No matter how much wealth a man may amass or how wisely he may distribute it, we cannot credit him with success if he has oppressed the hireling or dealt unfairly with his competitors or the public. Such a man is not a success; he is a failure. In his own soul he knows he is a failure, that is provided he has a soul, and if not, he is a greater failure still."

Read to Save the Trouble of Thinking.

A young man without education is taken into a library where he sees the rows upon rows of books. He wonders if he should try to read them all, but his older friend who accompanies him says: "When you go into a fruit store you do not stand and say, 'I can never eat all of that fruit; crates and crates of it, and carloads more in the warehouse.' Of course you don't. You eat enough for the good of your system, and let it go at that. Now, just apply the same sense to your reading. Read enough to keep your mind fresh and alert and vigorous; give it one new thought to wrestle with every day, and let the rest go. Oh, I know there is a certain school which holds that unless you have read this author or that author or this book or that book, you are hopelessly uninformed or behind the times. That's literary snobbery. Let them talk. A mind that consumes more than it can assimilate is morally on a par with a stomach that swallows more than it can digest. Gluttons, both of them. Read as much as you can think about, and no more. The trouble with many of our people is that they do not read to think, but to save themselves the trouble of thinking. The mind left to itself, insists upon activity. So they chloroform it."

Sorrow and Joy Matter of Moods.

"I have a theory," says a character in the same book, "that the world's sorrow is largely a matter of moods. I don't deny the sorrow nor the need for sorrow, nor the reality of it, but I do believe there is a mood of happiness which even the deepest sorrows cannot suppress. And the more you study people, the more you will understand moods, and perhaps be master of your own. And the man who can, by force of his own will, determine the mood in which he will live, is master of the world."

Discoveries of Newspaper Reporter.

One more bit in the same book that rings true is the discovery of a young newspaper reporter. "He became aware of the fact that in every community there are two communities, one on the surface, respectable, discreet, conventional, and one beneath the surface, to which these terms would not apply. He found that the province of the police was not to enforce morality, but to prevent immorality becoming obnoxious. Anything, almost, might go on so long as its effects were confined to the voluntary participants. Underneath the sham of good behavior was a world, known to the police and the newspapermen and a few others, which refused to accept standard conventions and lived according to its own impulse. And this world included so-called best citizens of both sexes. And they were good citizens. It seemed the community had two natures, a sort of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde on a community basis. Splendid qualities; large heartedness, generosity, were mingled and streaked through degrees of selfishness and lust, running down into positive crime. And the wonder was not what the papers printed but what they left untold."

OWES HER LIFE TO "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

After Years of Suffering with Dyspepsia, this Fruit Medicine Gave Relief

Mlle ANTOINETTE BOUCHER

917 Dorion St., Montreal.

"I am writing to tell you that Love my life to 'Fruit-a-tives' for this remedy relieved me when I had abandoned all hope of ever recovering my health.

I suffered terribly with Dyspepsia. I had it for years and all the medicines I took did not do me any good. I read something about 'Fruit-a-tives' being good for all Stomach Troubles and Disorders of Digestion so I tried them. After finishing a few boxes, I was entirely relieved of the Dyspepsia and my general health was restored.

I thank the great fruit medicine, 'Fruit-a-tives', for this wonderful relief."

The table given is for Port Simpson but the time for Prince Rupert varies only a few minutes on some days and on others is the same. The range of the tide may be computed as 5 per cent greater at Prince Rupert than at Port Simpson both at springs and neaps. Therefore the rise in the Prince Rupert harbor is slightly greater than Port Simpson. The height is in feet and tenths of feet above the average level of lower low water.
