ILLEGAL TRADE IS INCREASING

Increase in Liquor Tax Receipts Reflects in Unlawful Manufacture.

(Special via G. T. P. Telegraphs.)
DUBLIN, April 26.—High duties on whiskey have led to the increased practice of moonshining and illicit liquor manufacture in various parts of Ireland. The police are on the hunt for hidden stills and heavy punishments are meted out to those running them when they are proven.
Recent customs and excise reports show that in 1919 Dublin receipts totalled £8,750,000, an increase of nearly £4,500,000 over 1918 figures. The great increase is credited largely to the duties imposed during the year.

Commemoration of Second Battle of Ypres when the Canadians Saved the Day

"The Canadians Saved the Day." That is why the second battle of Ypres was commemorated last night. Colonel McMordie, who is familiar with the memorable occasion, told something of the battle at the theatre last night when a service was held with Colonel McMordie and Canon Rix as speakers.

Colonel McMordie explained that this battle was sometimes called the battle of St. Julien. We celebrated it because it was the first important engagement in which a Canadian division as a unit took part. On that occasion 5,000 allied soldiers died defending the road to Calais.

The Colonel told of the ancient glories of Ypres and of its condition at the time of the engagement. It was the middle of April when the Canadians took over about five miles of trenches. They were commanded by General Alderson. Amateur Canadian soldiers were opposed by highly trained Germans who looked on their opponents with disdain.

The Battle.

On April 22, 1915, the Germans started an intense bombardment but instead of following it up with an attack they used the deadly poisonous gas for the first time. The French Moroccan troops who held the lines next to the Canadians threw down their arms and fled. The fighting continued through Friday, Saturday and Sunday and then the lines were established, the Canadians had saved the day. At this engagement the Germans learned such respect for Canadian soldiers that it was used as a punishment to put a German in the line opposite the Canadians.
"Canadian people should be proud of their men and try to make the world a better place to live in," concluded the Colonel. "They should cherish for all time the memory of the dead heroes."
Canon Rix.

Canon Rix said that now people were getting away from the war danger they were forgetting some things connected with the war. After the heat was over people were saying things they were not allowed to say during war time. They were saying that the war was brought on from selfish motives. This idea the Canon corrected. The men had stood for freedom against a great menace, for national freedom against national slavery.

The men went away to fight with staunch hearts and the people here cheered them and had confidence in them, and that confidence was justified. They were untried men but they stood the test. The canon told of some of the things the men had to endure but they proved themselves as gallant as any in the Empire. They died as bravely as any. Many came back but others did not return. "We cannot add to their honor. The honor is to us not to them. In our own church there were thirty men who gave their lives and the church is forever honored by the fact," he said.
The speaker spoke of the value of a life as not in the number of years lived. He urged the men who did not go, to make the supreme sacrifice here. He urged them not to lose faith in God and in this way to raise a memorial to the dead.

Collection $150.

J. H. Kelly, president of the G. W. V. A., spoke of the objects of the association and of the memorial they were about to erect. As a result of the collection he was able to announce an addition of $150 to the funds.
Songs were rendered by Mrs. D. B. Morkill and J. S. Pudney, and the pipe band and theatre orchestra each played selections. Scripture was read by Rev. T. H. Nuttall and Rev. James Dunlop, while Dr. Grant led in prayer. Hymns were sung by the audience and at the conclusion the last post was sounded by Will Edmunds.

The chairman thanked the management of the theatre and the orchestra for their services, also the pipe band, the singers and J. F. Maguire who had given up the theatre for that night and had helped in the arrangements.
The theatre was beautifully draped in bunting.

Coming of English Capital to Stewart Marks New Era of Development.

"The coming in of the Canadian British Exploration Co. for active development in the Stewart district this season will bring the first English capital to that section," said Grand Mahood to the News on Saturday afternoon, "and the success of that development will be of inestimable value to the country in encouraging the investment of English capital. So far all the money invested there is American, with the exception of the Belgian-Algonquin Co. Although they are heavily interested in our mines, Mr. Bush and myself still have a controlling interest."
