Strike Bug is Infecting Coast.

The strike bug is again infecting the coast. There was a rumor some time ago that everything was likely to be tied up about May 1. Instead of a general strike, however, the men in the various callings are coming out one by one, until apparently very soon all will be out. It seems as if behind them all was a guiding hand pulling the strings.

The effect of the strike on business of course will be bad. Not only will the tendency be for things to get quiet, but the after effects are always felt. There seems nothing for it, however, but for everyone to grit his teeth and prepare to sit tight while the interested parties fight it out. So far there is no strike in Prince Rupert, and it is to be hoped that it will not come.

Men in Camps Worst to Suffer.

With the tie-up in transportation, the logging camps where supplies may be short will be the worst to suffer. The large places like Prince Rupert, while inconvenienced to some extent, will get along, especially when served with a railway.

Mail will be brought in by the railway and, although it will be a day later than when coming by boat, will keep local people in touch with the outside. Freight from Vancouver will be expensive, however, and there will soon be a shortage of fruit and vegetables.

The probability is that in a short time the longshoremen will be out, and the strike at Swanson Bay is only a prelude to the tie-up of other industries along the coast.

New Shingle Mill Is Now Operating.

The shingle mill at the drydock is in operation, adding another industry to those already here. Very soon the planing mill should be running and this will tend to make things busy here as soon as the industrial troubles have blown over. In the meantime everyone will be more or less marking time even if not shut down.

Strike of Bakers Seems to be Beaten.

Judging from reports coming every day from Vancouver the bakers' strike is beaten. It is impossible at this distance to judge as to the right or wrong of the strike, but things are not always decided on questions of right or wrong. Very often might is right, and in this case the master bakers seem to have won, although the matter is not yet settled. What chiefly concerns the people of the lower coast cities is that they are being supplied with bread once more.
