interest in reading of an accident which occurred to car 13 in the retinue of the Prince of Wales when touring in New Zealand. In that car was Everard C. Cotes, formerly of Prince Rupert and now special correspondent with the Prince of Wales for Reuter's news agency. The car was overturned and the occupants thrown into a ditch with the machine over, them. There they remained until the car was righted. Happily there were no bones broken, although they were badly cut about the face with blackberry thorns and were bruised and shaken.
