The Man in the Moon SAYS:-

THAT one of the things that won't get you anywhere is hitching your wagon to a star. It is much better to hitch to a little gas buggy or tin Lizzie.

THAT the very essence of wisdom is to be foolish sometimes for recreation.

THAT even an all-day sucker is of some use in the world.

THAT we take our fruit canned, our vegetables canned, our fish canned and our music canned, but we sometimes forget to can the gabfest.

THAT fashionable society has been called "canned life."

THAT the man who talks too much should sometimes take time to scratch his long furry ear.

THAT hot air is all right in its place, but when too much diffused becomes quite harmless.

THAT the thief usually gives largely to charity.

THAT now we watch real democracy at work at San Francisco.

THAT if the big American conventions are the last word in democratic government, then give me a soviet or a Sultan.

THAT living is keeping in tune with the best there is in life. Dis-ease spells death. And yet without death, life would be a weariness.

THAT jazz must be all right, else why the carnival tomorrow with the daughters as the moving spirits.

THAT the man who cannot enjoy himself tomorrow does not deserve to be a son of Canada.

THAT every man is a son of Canada who recognizes Canada as his home and tries to be a good citizen.

THAT a college degree is all right if it does not accentuate the length of the furry ears.

THAT fisherfolk are the salt of the earth. The Bible says so, even if Peter did hear the cock crow.

THAT there is something about the loneliness of the sea that makes for conviviality on the land.

THAT a wise old owl is the stupidest thing on earth. He is worse than a chicken.

THAT you should try to imitate your mother, said the head of the household to his daughter. "I do pa," was the reply. "The other day I heard you call her an old hen."

THAT there will be more Scotsmen in heaven than any other nationality. Why? Because salvation is free.

THAT no place would be heaven to an Irishman unless he had a chance for a scrap there.

THAT the stolid Englishman would want a game of cricket, don't you know, in any perfect life.

THAT jazz will be the order of the day tomorrow.

THAT who said merrygoround? Why every kiddie in town, to be sure.

THAT when a census of the seals is taken, will the legless animals have to answer a lot of fool questions like Canadians will next year?

THAT killing off the surplus males seems all right since seals do not have to work for a living.

THAT tomorrow should be a great day for the kiddies, and there will be plenty of old people feeling young again too.

THAT the woman who tells her troubles is the most disagreeable creature on earth, and a man with the same proclivity is just as bad, or he would be if he talked as much.

THAT if we were all as stupid as we look, this would be a dull old world.

THAT life is like Ben Self's merrygoround. It does not seem to get you anywhere and it is pleasantest when accompanied by lively music.

THAT frankness is a pleasant thing to talk about in the abstract, but hitch the quality to some person and we all suddenly find we always preferred duplicity.

THAT a lot of people would be real nice if they weren't so horribly good.

THAT this has no reference to anyone living in Prince Rupert.

THAT for one man with a perverted brain there are a dozen with perverted stomachs.

THAT there is no failure except for those who think failure. Failure is purely mental, although it sometimes follows a physical manifestation.

THAT Prince Rupert is not exactly a climate. It is a mental condition. There is danger that it may mean "a few minutes late."

LONDON UNIVERSITY PROPOSED BUILDINGS

LONDON, June 29.—The site offered by the Government to London University for a new headquarters lies on the north side of the British Museum extension and comprises over 11 acres. Central and convenient, it would afford adequate accommodation for the increasing work of the university, which is now the largest in the Kingdom. One or two objections may be urged against the position. For example, an avenue cuts it in two. This, however, should not be regarded as an insuperable barrier. Bloomsbury has the air of a university quarter, whereas other situations that could be mentioned are deprived of it.

The question has been referred to a committee for early report. An estimate of the cost of the buildings to be erected is no less than £5,000,000.

Carnival Rnymster

All ye lords and ladies gay,
Hear ye what I have to say.
When ye are at the Carnival
Step inside our concert hall,
There you will enjoy a treat
Such as mortals seldom meet.
Mrs. Bryant heads the bill
As an artist of rare skill.
Soft and sweet Hawaiian notes
From her ukelele floats.
A dainty maid from far Japan
Will tell the story of her fan.
Eight saucy dolls in overalls
Will sing a song of patches,
And songsters fair who will compare
With linnets in the branches.
The kiddies, too, will 'stonish you.
Picture, song, rhymes and fairy times.
So sweet that they will haunt you.
And then the fairies will trip in
And dance so light and airy.
So wet on fair,
Please all be there,
For funds are necessary.

After taking in the fireworks at Market Place tomorrow night, bring your girl to the Sons of Canada dance in St. Andrew's Hall.
