BELGIAN ATROCITIES

The report of the Commission of Enquiry into the doings of the German soldiers in Belgium makes blood-curdling reading. The early newspaper stories of horrible atrocities were looked upon as isolated instances, committed by drunken brutes, but the report of the commission, of which Lord Bryce is chairman, shows, beyond any possible doubt, that the whole diabolical business was simply part of the Prussian doctrine of "fearfulness." Horrible acts were committed by officers, and at the instigation of officers, who were acting under orders from their superiors. Nothing was respected and nothing was sacred. Savages from Central Africa would have been more manly than these "cultured" Huns, in their treatment of women and children.

Details of the report are too horrible for words, but we have the assurance of Lord Bryce and his colleagues that they can prove up to the hilt the truth of the charges made. Old men and women were mutilated and children and women were treated likewise, while hundreds of innocent non-combatants were lined up and shot in cold blood. The report of these atrocities should do more to hasten recruiting than all the appeals Lord Kitchener and the War Office can ever issue.

FORD'S NEW MOVE

Henry Ford has bought a large tract of land outside Detroit and announces that he will build a tractor factory, blast furnace, rolling mill, and motor factory, in which upwards of twenty thousand men will be employed. He will also lay out a new town on the most approved plans in which the men, if they choose, may build homes for themselves.

Owing to the war, Mr. Ford has had some difficulty in securing steel for his auto works, and this fact set him planning to provide a supply of his own. He is going to do the whole thing in a big way.

The notable feature about the project, as far as it concerns employees, is that Mr. Ford does not intend to build what people call "a model city." He intends, rather, to create what may be called model opportunities for a city—that is to say, the streets will be skillfully laid out, the public sanitary arrangements will be good, and the prospective city will get away to a good start. The inhabitants will have employment at the best possible wages, but as citizens of the town they will be as free and independent as citizens anywhere else. The workman, if he wants to build a home in the town, will buy a lot for what it is worth. There will be no real estate speculation. When a man builds a home he will please himself as to its style and size, and he will own it and his garden absolutely. He will be free to sell out and leave if he wants to. The Ford idea is that all the reformation the world needs is the giving of honest work at good wages to every man who will do honest work. If he can get it, and make enough out of it so that he and his can live decently and comfortably. He says that his steel works will pay, and the first men who deserve and will get pay are the men who will do the work. Mr. Ford is a man of ideas, and people everywhere will follow with interest his bold and big experiments.—Toronto Star.

E. H. MORTIMER HEARS FROM E. O. RIETHEL

Third London General Hospital, Wandsworth, London, June 17.

Dear Mr. Mortimer:—You may have heard I got wounded at Festubert on May 20th. Shrapnel, two in left forearm and one in left thigh and a couple of scratches on back of neck. All except the leg wound are quite healed. The leg wound got poisoned, but is doing well now, and I expect to be out of here by about the end of the month. With the exception of the leg, am feeling very fit, and that does not bother me, but it keeps me in bed.

Quite a few of the Rupert boys got hit, some, I am sorry to say, have taken the "long trail."

Trusting you are all well, and with kindest remembrances to all of you, I am

Yours very sincerely,
E. O. RIETHEL.

ENGINEERS RECEIVE PAY IN LIEU OF HOLIDAYS

The finance committee recommended the city council to allow City Engineer Mason, and Assistant Engineer Parker, two week's pay in lieu of holidays. This was adopted in view of the fact that these gentlemen had taken no holidays, and had put in a great deal of night work without extra pay.

Coughing scatters germs —Stop it

Coughing increases the irritation of the already inflamed mucous membranes and is moreover apt to carry disease to others.

Mathieu's Syrup of Tar and Cod Liver Oil promptly stops coughing, and soon, thanks to its tonic properties, effects a permanent cure.

The wonderful popularity of Mathieu's Syrup of Tar and Cod Liver Oil is specially due to its great value as a permanent lung and bronchial healer.
