SIR RICHARD'S RETURN

Sir Richard McBride has returned to Victoria, and is keeping the official press busy recounting his magnificent efforts on behalf of British Columbia, while in Europe. Thanks to the premier's advertising, Britain has discovered that British Columbia grows timber, and that even railroad ties can be produced here. In order to confirm his statements regarding this industry, and to "secure recognition for our timber products in the old land," Sir Dick has arranged that the British Columbia government shall take over an interned vessel that was formerly stationed at the Falkland Islands.

Sir Richard's ambitions as a ship-broker are evidently growing, though they seem to have turned into a new channel. Probably he figures that a timber ship looks a bigger bargain and is less controversial than pesky little submarines. The new scheme has one big advantage, in that those meddlesome, inquisitive gentlemen at Ottawa won't be able to ask a single question. Having drained the province dry, Sir Richard probably wants to start his friends in the overseas carrying business. The new field offers great possibilities, though he will have to take great care that all the ships are in port on election days, or that he gets the Hon. W. J. to pass special legislation empowering voters at sea to record their votes by wireless.

The premier says "London knows all about our magnificent resources, and expresses confidence in our management of them." It would be interesting to know just exactly what the term "London" covers. Does it include any shareholders or depositors in the Dominion Trust Company, or is it made up of capitalists who have been gifted with some thousands of acres of fertile land? British Columbia has undoubtedly great resources, but, thanks to McBride and his friends, the land of the province is in the hands of a few speculators, who doubtless think the business was cleverly managed.

Sir Richard was also able to impress upon the various committees in London the desirability of British Columbia as a home for soldiers after the war. Is this a hint that the speculators are to hand back the land they hold, in order to provide farms for the men who offered all they had to the Empire? The cities of British Columbia have more men now than they can find work for, and the government has left little to be farmed that is worth farming, therefore it would be interesting to have a little more detailed information on this point.

In many columns of type, the premier does not divulge the reason for his hurried departure and tardy return, but perhaps this is more than can be expected. He carefully avoids any mention of Ottawa, but this is only natural as the subject must be distasteful for various reasons.

ALASKANS HAD NOT HEARD OF THE WAR

Ruby Alaska.—Capt. A. D. Williams, after an absence of ten months to a day, returned to Ruby last Monday. He has been in the extreme upper reaches of the Novik river all the time, and had not heard any information of the great war that is now holding the attention of the world until he neared the Yukon a few days ago. Bob Smith, Jack Larson, and Ed Slater came out from the same general region, and it is known that several men spent the winter across the divide on the waters of the Kuskokwin, none of whom had heard of the war.
