GERMANY'S REPLY

The German reply to the American note is typically Prussian in its insolence. It carefully ignores the question of guarantees for the future, and, in delightfully evasive language, throws the blame for the Lusitania disaster on to British methods of conducting the war.

The same type of argument was used to explain away the Belgian atrocities, and the use of asphyxiating gases in the trenches. From the German view-point, the end must always justify the means, no matter how brutal, and contrary to recognized international law the means may be.

Britain must be fought by any means, foul or fair, and if careless American citizens get in the way that is their own affair. What Washington may think or have to say in the matter is not of the slightest importance. It is plain that Berlin will be pleased to carry on a correspondence with Washington for years if need be, but that America will never get the slightest satisfaction.

The best reply America can now make is to have her shipyards go ahead and build the suggested motor speed boats, with which the British admiralty propose to clear the seas of submarines. It is evident that the only argument which is paid any attention to in Berlin is an argument backed by force. So long as Germany has a submarine, that vessel will act the pirate, therefore, the only plan is to capture every submarine in sight and destroy those which are building. America can assist by producing a huge fleet of aeroplanes with which to attack the German ship-yards, ammunition depots and factories, and railroad centres. This is the only line of argument which suits the occasion, and America can follow it up without the formality of declaring war.

WAR BUSINESS

Estimating the "war business" for the United States at $1,500,000,000, it is fair, says the National City Bank of Chicago, in a recent circular, to put the profit at $300,000,000 or 20 per cent. "Such a profit appears enormous, but it has to be judged in each instance with reference to the loss encountered in dismantling the plant, and equipping it with expensive machinery for turning out work which it was never designed to produce. Most of the machinery will go to the scrap-heap as soon as the war ends, when each plant will have to be put into condition again to handle its normal business. This situation was clearly foreseen by manufacturers and in a measure provided for. But the after effects represented by the cost of restoring the plants and regaining the business that had to be sacrificed will be highly interesting, to say the least."

Putting the Canadian war business at $420,000,000 and profits at 20 per cent., the profits would figure at $84,000,000. To some extent the same conditions with respect to machinery, and noted above, apply to Canada. The after effects here will also be highly interesting. Gamblers in war stocks will suffer and some plants which have rushed headlong into the war order business, without proper consideration, will learn an expensive lesson. On the other hand, the war order business is likely to lead to a substantial Canadian export trade with Europe after the war is over.—Monetary Times.

BELLA COOLA AND DISTRICT NOTES

The S. S. Chelohsin arrived at 7 p. m. on Sunday. Messrs. Fred Hendricks, Harry Burt and Ed. Oien availed themselves of the occasion to return to Bella Coola; while Dr. W. J. Quinlan being of an entirely different turn of mind, packed his shirt in a newspaper and left us for a short period.

Immigration Officer McNamara, of Vancouver, came up and without leaving the wharf inspected a number of orphans from State of Washington, which had been adopted into different families in the valley. It is hardly necessary to state that he found them well cared for and presenting an exceptionally good appearance.

Dr. W. J. Quinlan is away to visit the people of Quatsino, as now that the fishing season is on and the harvest will be gathered soon, the organs of mastication will be in demand.

Fred Hendricks and Harry Burt helped Mr. Burnett to survey some claims at Rivers Inlet, and are now back for the summer.

Ed. Oien came in from Takush Harbor, where he is running a cattle ranch. We suspect he came in to get something to eat.

Jesse Hendricks, Gus Swanberg and Judd Farmer gave us a few days' visit last week. They had explored the wilds of the west coast of Princess Royal Island. And it seems their explorations had been to good purpose, too, as they report finding

Coughing scatters germs—Stop it

Coughing increases the irritation of the already inflamed mucous membranes and is moreover apt to carry disease to others. Mathieu's Syrup of Tar and Cod Liver Oil promptly stops coughing, and soon, thanks to its tonic properties, effects a permanent cure.

The wonderful popularity of Mathieu's Syrup of Tar and Cod Liver Oil is especially due to its great value as a permanent lung and bronchial healer. Sold everywhere, 35c large bottles.

EXCITING FOOTBALL ON WEDNESDAY NIGHT

In a league game at Recreation Park on Wednesday night, the Regiment defeated the Drydock by 4 goals to 3.

At half time the Regiment led by 3 goals to nil, but the Drydock then got busy and rattled on 3 goals, making the scores equal. Near the close the Regiment scored a fourth goal amid great excitement. The Regiment now heads the city league.
