WHAT MANITOBA HAS IN MIND

The people of Manitoba on Friday last did one good job. They cleaned out, almost to the last fragment, the broken-down political machine that had cursed their province for more than a decade and made the idealism of democracy and parliamentary institutions a cynical mockery. The Roblin-Rogers regime—Roblin withdrew only a few weeks ago, and Rogers, notwithstanding his Federal office, stayed with the played-out game to the very last, fighting desperately for his own political life—the disgraced and demoralized regime unclean to its very heart, brazen in its corruptness, and impudent in its program of public rascality, has been swept away. The sorry rump of a Conservative party that will appear at the next session of the Manitoba legislature has neither the wit nor the ability to do either good or harm. Its utter helplessness, even as a Rogers agent of wrongdoing, makes it pathetic.

No other province in Canada, unless it be British Columbia, was ever so deliberately, so systematically, and so extensively looted as Manitoba has been in the past dozen years. The grafting and nefarious exploitation of public interests for private gain was matched in shamelessness only by the lawless manipulation of the electoral machinery permitted by the law officers of the Crown and by which the government itself made political profit. For years the decent citizens of Manitoba were galled by the yoke of their bondage, but against the power and the craftiness of Roblin and Rogers they were almost in despair. The greatest public service Sir Rodmond ever rendered—and this should be counted to him almost for righteousness—was when, in tired-out disgust at "the hungry Ottawa gang," he "chucked" the premiership, gave Norris a free hand, and left Rogers to shift for himself.

And the Hon. Robert Rogers did shift for himself. Notorious as a skilled election manager long before he entered the Borden government, and boastful of his success in "winning elections," he gave himself up to win in this provincial campaign. Nothing of his old-time arts was neglected. Nothing in his federal prestige was omitted. And what came of it? His special lieutenants, Sir James Aikins and Mr. W. H. Sharpe, deluded out of the House of Commons, were beaten to the point of disgrace, his own Winnipeg constituency rebuked his candidates with majorities against them far up in the thousands, and ever his nurtured and pap-fed newspapers, in the province and out of it, scarcely did him the hollow reverence of even a crocodile tear. And this is the man to gratify whose ambition for the Canadian Commissionership at London all Canada was to have been thrown into the shame of a war-election a few months ago! How are the mighty fallen!

But let the dead bury their dead. It is the one business of Premier Norris and his colleagues, in spite of the heavy handicap of a too large majority, so to serve their province with integrity and ability that the ugly mess left by their predecessors may be cleaned up, the self-respect of Manitoba's citizens restored, and a government established true to the principles and the spirit of progressive Liberalism.

It matters very little that the government's name is Liberal; it matters everything that the principles be progressive and their work-out in the daily life of the province intelligent and impartial and just. Manitoba has a chance to return to political decency. It is the duty of the Norris government to lead the way.—Toronto Globe.
