Russia Confident.
London, August 28.—Reports show that the Russian retirement was a real retreat and not a rout. The Germans took the fortresses because they were undefended. Polivanoff, the Russian minister, has announced that he is raising another army of a million. There is a feeling of confidence that the Grand Duke Nicholas is luring the Germans to their doom.

Persian Trouble.
Petrograd, August 28.—A telegram received from Teheran, Persia, reports that the Russian and the British consuls and their military attaches have been attacked at Kenghever by an armed band led by M. O. Schunemann, the German consular agent at Tabriz. They defended themselves with rifles, but suffered some losses.

A cabinet meeting was held and as a result a request was sent to the commander of a Persian brigade of Cossacks, who are encamped four days march from Kenghever to send a detachment there immediately.

GENERAL SIR SAM HUGHES WAS RIGHT ON THE JOB

This photo shows Canada's Minister of Militia is as curious as sitting as any in which the gallant general in his adventurous career ever found himself. It was taken during the recent Welsh Eistedfodd, or festival, at Bangor. The figure in front is the lady harpist for the occasion. As she was about to play the Eistedfodd song her chair slipped from the stone and she would have fallen but for the ready assistance of the general. British papers commented on his quick-witted gallantry.

CHARLES LESTOR ON ECONOMIC CONDITIONS

The meeting in the Empress Theatre last night, under the auspices of the Trades and Labor Council, was well attended. After a few introductory remarks, the chairman, S. D. Macdonald, called upon Charles Lestor to deliver an address on "Present Day Economic Conditions."
At the outset, Mr. Lestor defined labor as an abstract thing, and went on to show that the working man does not sell his labor, but so many hours of his life at so many dollars, or, in other words, his power to labor.
In speaking of capital he read Prof. Shortt's definition, which was "capital is what a man has over and above his daily needs, and which he applies to some line of production." After pointing out that wealth is not necessarily capital, Mr. Lestor gave his definition of capital as "Capital is the result of past labor, used to compel present labor to produce profits." He traced the original growth of the capitalist idea by the following illustration: In a village you have a few cobblers, each producing shoes. One cobbler goes to another and says: "How many shoes can you produce in a week?" The second cobbler replies, "One pair." The first says: "I'll give you a pair of shoes, or the value of a pair of shoes, each week if you work for me." The second agrees. The first cobbler makes the same bargain with five others, and the seven of them start in to make shoes. The first cobbler, who is now boss, finds that one man is a good stitcher, another is a good cutter, and so on, therefore he has each man specializing, and at the end of the week the seven of them have produced eight pairs of shoes, when individually they would have produced only seven. Six of them get one pair each, but the boss gets two. Then a machine stitcher is introduced, the boss gets five pairs to the others'

BILLY REEVES AT THE MAJESTIC THEATRE

The Majestic tonight shows a most beautiful three-act drama, entitled "Mother's Roses." The story is of the power of mother love, and is rich in human interest.
Billy Reeves, the famous London music hall comedian, makes a decided hit in "The New Butler," and bids fair to rival the popularity of Charles Chaplin. "On the Border" is a lively western drama of real merit.

one, and so on. Mr. Lestor gave several similar illustrations to show how labor is exploited by the capitalist.
At the close he was accorded a vote of thanks.
