"JIM THE PENMAN" AT THE WESTHOLME THEATRE

John Mason, the celebrated actor, makes his first screen appearance at the Westholme tonight, in Sir Charles L. Young's great dramatic triumph "Jim the Penman." It is a heart-grIPPING story of the great forger who sins for love and whose after-life is one of remorse and retribution.

Mr. Mason portrays with great force and dramatic discretion the title character, the man whose clever pen works so much harm to even his dearest, and which finally writes, with his heart's blood, his own punishment. With overpowering motives and situations, and a series of tense climaxes, "Jim the Penman" is one of the foremost dramatic successes of the contemporary stage. The unqualified triumph which it scored throughout the entire world was a tribute to its dramatic power and thrilling realism. Its portrayal on the screen surpasses the success of the original production on the stage.

"The New Teacher," a good comedy, completes this great program, which also includes some dainty new numbers by the orchestra.

An iron will need not necessarily be a pig-iron one.

"THE HEART THAT KNEW" AT THE MAJESTIC THEATRE

"The Heart That Knew," a Pathe masterpiece in three sensational acts, is the feature at the Majestic tonight. It is the story of Lucia Dorval, an orphan who is looked upon by her employer, Edward Alvina, a wealthy banker, as his own child. The banker dies and leaves his fortune to Lucia. His nephew, who has been cut off, schemes with the banker's secretary, who has also been disappointed, to get rid of Lucia. The girl is in love with Thomas Cardone, a violinist, who, since Lucia has become wealthy, goes away. The schemers find the violinist and then take the girl on a pleasure trip during which they visit a ravine across which there is a bridge in poor repair. The villains have removed the warning sign from the bridge, and the girl innocently walks out on the structure and disappears down the cliff. The girl is given up as dead, and through the efforts of Pasca, the secretary, the violinist is arrested and charged with the murder.

Meantime, the girl has been rescued by natives and is held in slavery. On the day of his execution, the violinist begs permission to play the violin and Lucia, being near, hears the music and recognizes the player. She rushes to the prison and then things begin to happen for Mr. Pasca. It is a most thrilling drama.

There is also a fine Pathe Gazette, a splendid colored Pathe educational feature, and a scream comedy, entitled "Laughing Gas."
