BOOKER T. WASHINGTON HAS PASSED AWAY

A week ago Booker T. Washington, the able leader of the negro race, died at Tuskegee, Alta., from bright's disease and arterio sclerosis.

He was the founder of the Tuskegee Institute, and was born a slave near Hale's Ford, Va., in 1858. He was educated at the Hampton Industrial Institute at Hampton, Va., and the Wayland Seminary, Washington, D. C. He became an instructor in the Hampton Institute and later a teacher in the public schools of West Virginia.

The practical education of the negro was the life-work of Booker Washington, and through his efforts large numbers of negroes have been educated and turned into useful citizens. Andrew Carnegie, in making a gift to the Tuskegee Institute founded by Mr. Washington, said that the history of the United States would include two Washingtons—one white and one black.

Mr. Washington earned a great deal of money from his lectures and writings and practically every dollar was devoted to the welfare of the negro race. He spoke all over the U. S., Canada and several European countries. "The Story of My Life" and "Up from Slavery" are two of his most successful books. Mr. Washington was the first negro to be invited to dinner at the White House. Roosevelt's invitation at that time caused a big storm of protest.
