HOW REUTER'S NEWS AGENCY WAS STARTED

An interesting story of how Reuter, the famous agency for foreign news, began is given by Mr. Richard Whiteing in his book, "My Harvest" (Hodder and Stoughton). Reuter went to the London Daily News, in the offices of which Mr. Whiteing worked for a number of years, as to the other leading papers, with an offer of copious and trustworthy telegrams from abroad.

The manager naturally asked for terms.

"Nothing," said Reuter, genially.

"Come, come! that will never do! What do you expect to get out of it?"

"The esteem of the British people, whom I admire."

"Humph! You may send 'em in."

They came, they were worth printing, and they duly appeared on those extraordinary terms in every important journal. At the end of the year they had become indispensable, and then the philanthropist called again.

"You like my little telegrams?"

"Undoubtedly."

"Well, I want to arrange about going on with them."

"Very pleased, I am sure."

"My terms are five thousand dollars a year."

"Whew! That's a very different story from the one you—"

"Ah!" said the other, quietly, "we are talking business now."

And he got his five thousand all round—Tit Bits.
