GROCERS UNITE

The war is working changes in business circles in the city, one of which is the union of Mr. McMeekin with Mr. Fuller in the grocery business, on account of Mr. McMeekin's former partner having volunteered for active service.

The best wishes of the citizens will go with Mr. Williams in his efforts to "do his bit" for the Empire, and a full measure of success will be wished for Messrs. Fuller and McMeekin who have joined forces in order to provide the public with the finest of table commodities at as little expense as possible, and, therefore, at the lowest possible prices. Both gentlemen are thoroughly well known, and the enlarged store on Third Avenue, opposite Second Street, will be a busy one.

Never envy the mastery of other men unless you are willing to pay the price of mastership.

When a man wants a wife, like mother was, the home of his youth was happy.

IMPORTANT

L. Murray Fuller and Thomas McMeekin announce that they are forming a partnership and intend to carry on a grocery business in Prince Rupert under the firm name of Fuller & McMeekin, in the premises heretofore occupied by Fuller's Grocery, which are being enlarged to accommodate the extensive stock which will be carried by the firm. Both partners solicit the patronage of their former customers, and assure the public of satisfaction in quality, price and service. Watch for the Specials. Motor Delivery.

The Tale The Wagons Tell

My office window faces a street, close to the railway freight sheds.

All day long a steady stream of trucks and lorries lumber by—loaded with boxes, barrels and bales.

One truck I noticed the other afternoon was particularly interesting. No two boxes were the same, and stencilled on the end of each was the name of some well-known product—soap, tobacco, socks, breakfast food, cocoa, port, tea, chocolates, perfumery and baking powder.

Gathered there in prosaic wooden boxes were the results of thousands of hand's labor in all parts of the world.

There, behind that obviously prosaic truck-load of freight was the whole romance of modern commerce—the skilled production, the universal demand for food, drink and raiment, and the world-wide distribution of the things we use every day.

And then I speculated why we use these things every day, instead of some other things; and that brought me plump back to my own job of advertising.

The names of some of the boxes on the lorry were known everywhere to-day, but had been unknown a few years ago; and I saw then more clearly than ever before that Advertising is really a great channel digger. It is like the Panama Canal. You can sail from Montreal to Vancouver now, around the Horn. You can get there, but it is going to take months. A year or so from now you will sail through the Panama Canal and chop the journey to less than half. A new channel will have been dug.

The great names in commerce to-day are those of the manufacturers who have let modern advertising steam-shovel a channel across the isthmus of distributing difficulties.

The great names in the commerce of to-morrow will be those of men who widen and dredge this channel so that the greater traffic may pass smoothly and quickly from the source of production to the homes of the consumer.
