THE BY-ELECTIONS

Today, polling is taking place in Rossland and Vancouver in by-elections brought about through the dismissal of Sir Richard McBride, followed by the appointment of Mr. Lorne Campbell and Mr. C. E. Tisdall to the cabinet. The Conservatives are very confident that the new members of the cabinet will be returned with large majorities, and it is possible that their confidence is not misplaced.

Both gentlemen have unlimited cash resources behind them, a very important matter from a Conservative standpoint, and they also have the added dignity of cabinet rank, which, like rank of any kind, seems to weigh heavily upon the imagination of many people. For the welfare of the province it is to be hoped that both members are defeated, as their defeat will not be in any sense a loss to the province.

Mr. Macdonald and Mr. Willson would both do splendid service for the province in opposition during the short period of life before the Bowser administration, and would really be a source of strength to the government, if the political boss of the province were disposed to view matters from the highest standpoint. The greatest disaster which ever befell Sir Richard McBride was when he was returned with no opposition except two Socialist members. A strong opposition makes for strong government, and it was impossible that Mr. Parker Williams and Mr. Place even though they worked unceasingly, could keep in check the movements of the McBride-Bowser administration. The thanks of the whole province are due to these two gentlemen for the tireless way in which they performed their duties, and it will be the sincere wish of every man who has the highest welfare of the province at heart that they will have at least two, if not three, able co-workers when the house assembles next month.

FOR WILLIAM

The Bella Coola Courier, which is striving its hardest to bring about clean government in the province, has the following very pertinent questions to put to the Hon. William Manson:

While a member of the government, which Mr. Manson supports, the then provincial secretary accepts from the Pacific Coal Mines, Ltd., shares to the value of $105,000. Does Mr. Manson believe these shares were given to Dr. Young for his own private benefit and use?

Does Mr. Manson believe that the $80,000 commission paid by Mr. Bowser to Mr. Alexander and Mr. Reid for alleged services in the Kitilano land deal were really so much added to their private fortunes?

Mr. Manson is reputed as an honorable gentleman and we shall accept his answer as a proof of his convictions.

If he ignores our questions we shall assume that he does not care to commit himself, and in that case he will stand convicted as an accomplice in transactions he cannot defend.

NOTES AND COMMENTS

"We have not wasted your assets" is the plea of the Hon. C. E. Tisdall. We suppose the $80,000 paid to Lawyer Read did not come out of the pockets of the people, and that the $45,000 unaccounted for by Joe Matson dropped from the air.

The Journal says that the premier does not intend to give further aid to the P. G. E. and in the next paragraph says that the work will be completed under a short term loan. Perhaps the Journal does not consider short term loans as assistance.

C. M. Woodworth, in a letter to The World, says that a Conservative wishing to retain the good name of the party should vote for Mr. Macdonald in order to teach Mr. Bowser that the people have some voice in the government of British Columbia.

The Vancouver World says that T. D. Pattullo, of Prince Rupert, made the speech of the evening at Mr. Macdonald's meeting on Monday.

many must be swamped and many more men will be required. Britain has sent two millions; two millions more are ready, and two more millions are needed. France was fighting valiantly for her life and sacrificing many thousands of her bravest sons. Britain was doing the same. The French were more impetuous, rushing at the enemy while the British trept up making the most of any cover.

He spoke with the warmest appreciation of the Americans who had gone to the front. He had fifty of them with him at Ypres and they proved themselves brave fellows. He could not impress upon them too strongly the necessity for more men. For every division at the front there must be two in reserve.

He warned the boys of the 102nd that they were in for no picnic, as he intended, when he got them down to Comox, to put them through six months work in one. They would study movements during the day and try them out at night. All the active work at the front was carried out under cover of darkness and it was essential that the men be trained accordingly. The Allies were continually devising new movements, while usually the Germans stuck to the old-fashioned method of advancing in close formation. He said that they were particular about a man's eyesight in taking recruits, but he had seen Germans advancing in such order that they could have been shot down by a man who was stone blind.

He appreciated what had been done for the battalion here, but pointed out that over $400 had been expended in connection with the battalion which had not been authorized. He said that the department would not meet such charges and, if this amount was not paid by the city or people here, he would have to meet it out of his personal funds, as he would not leave the country until it was paid. In conclusion, he said that, from what he saw on the streets, he felt satisfied that Prince Rupert could easily furnish a hundred more men and he hoped they would be enrolled before long. Just as soon as arrangements could be made, the boys would be transferred to Comox, where they would be thoroughly drilled, after which they would have three months more training in England.

Both on rising and on resuming his seat, the colonel was given a tremendous ovation by the audience.

In the course of the evening, songs were rendered, and the meeting resolved itself into a smoker at which the members of the 102nd displayed quite an array of musical talent.
