MORE EXCUSES

The Tories have devised all sorts of excuses for their overwhelming rout in Vancouver and Victoria. First, it was that the Conservatives themselves desired an opposition, and, therefore, voted for M. A. Macdonald and H. C. Brewster with that end in view. Then the Vancouver Tories very unkindly threw the blame for the deluge which drowned poor Tisdall upon the misguided orators who took the platform in a lame effort to combat the schemes laid bare in "The Crisis." The latest is from Victoria, where, at first, the unfortunate Mr. Flumerfelt was saddled with the blame on account of his being a poor vote-getter, and it is to the effect that the Liberals managed by some miraculous means to gather in the prohibition vote with one hand and the liquor vote with the other, neither hand knowing what kind of nefarious work the other was indulging in.

Mr. Miller, of Grand Forks, a gentleman who has had a wide and varied experience of elections and election dodges, accuses the Liberals of having a conference with the liquor men. How dare the Liberals consort with the liquor trade? This particular line is a special preserve of the Tories and it is extremely unfair that a Liberal should even seek to recognize a liquor man on the street.

The Journal comes out with a four-column, three-tier headline charging the Liberals with debauching the electors during the elections. Now the Tories from past experience should have a fairly good working knowledge of the electorate and its little weaknesses, but surely it is rather unfortunate at the present juncture for the local Tory organ to come out and proclaim in big type that the southern electors were debauched. What the Matson press may have to say of the Liberals is never taken seriously, but we must protest against such a slur being cast upon the people of the south. The debauchery, at that, must have been of a wholesale character since over four thousand were debauched in Vancouver and nearly twenty-five hundred in Victoria. Perhaps, however, we should deduct the Tories who voted Grit from these figures, as it is beyond all possibility that they could have been debauched.

After all the charges of Mr. Miller, who is by way of being a kind of a Conservative wing leader himself, have been disposed of by Mr. Brewster, the Tories will have plenty of time to find out still more excuses for the landslides. Just in passing, however, it might be well to remark that the she-bear which did such a healthy business on election day in Victoria was not run by the Liberals, and was closed only when the supporters of Mr. Brewster appealed to the police. The fact of the matter is that Mr. Miller and his friends imagine that they will look at least a little whiter if they can manage to throw some mud on the opposition.

NOTES AND COMMENTS

Roumania seems determined to get into the war with both feet now that she has taken the notion to oppose Germany. Had she come in some months ago, it would have saved a heap of trouble for poor Serbia.

Wilhelm is a very persistent gentleman and still insists on having Verdun, in fact he won't be happy till he gets it. Well, well, if he doesn't get Verdun he will be so badly licked that he won't ask for more.

The Journal thinks it is illogical for the Liberals to ask for a dissolution when half of the people of the province have signified their desire for a new government. The premier's attempt to continue legislating when the country has already given him notice to quit can hardly be termed logical, to put it mildly.

Ernest Miller, the member for Grand Forks, seems to be particularly bitter at Mr. Brewster, however, it may be some consolation to the Liberal leader to observe that the Grand Forks representative is just as sore at Bowser. That prohibition declaration of Bowser's seems to have hit poor Ernest very hard indeed.

The Liberal leader must be some artist in vote-getting when he can collar both the liquor vote and the prohibition vote at the same time.

"THE GARDEN OF THE GODS" AT WESTHOLME THEATRE

"The Garden of the Gods," this week's installment of "The Diamond from the Sky," is one of the finest scenic features of this great serial, while the quest of the diamond proceeds as excitingly as ever. The rest of the show is first-class. "The Lost Lord Lovell" is a story of an impostor who poses as a peer, while the real Lord Lovell is wending his way through life as a butler, falling in love with the cook. Of course it works out all right in the end, though a pretty actress marries the impostor in the belief that he is the real thing.

"His Sister's Kiddies," is a screen version of "Helen's Babies." Poor old uncle is left in charge of two young imps and they give him the time of his life, night and day. "The Home of Silence" is a drama which emphasises in dramatic fashion the cruelty of jail life. The Gaumont Graphic is one of the finest features of a splendid bill, the views of the Belgian army being particularly good.
