GERMAN UNDERSEA
PETROL SUPPLY TANKS

warn her neighbor when from the latter vessel also the suspicious object was seen. A pretty game at once developed between the two ships. It was a game which had been fatal to submarines of the enemy before, but on this occasion the prospective victim was unresponsive. The supposed periscope remained where it first appeared, despite the wiles of the cruisers. The uncertainty did not last very long, and as soon as it was realized that, whatever the object was, it certainly was not a periscope, there was an examination by launch, and the young naval officer in charge of the examining party received what was perhaps the greatest surprise of his career.

A Great Steel Tank.

The object which had sent the cruisers on a merry dance was a very unpretentious buoy, made in Germany. It was hauled aboard the launch, and the light tackle which held it was carefully gathered in. Then came, swirled in seaweed, heavier tackle which had lain on the ocean floor, and with the heavier tackle came the surprise. Running gear, devised and shackled with great ingenuity, was set free, and the launch crew hauled away happily. Up to the surface hove a great steel tank, and as its crusted top threw off the load of water with a sidelong heave, a voice from the launch remarked, it is said, "What price the Great Eastern!" Thus was found one of the first petrol-supply depots set under the sea, whilst we were wrangling over domestic affairs, for the use of an enemy who had no thought of war! The tank was carefully examined, and the surprise occasioned by its discovery was no greater than the respect evoked by the skill displayed in its construction. Without difficulty, and in complete safety, the U boats could draw oil fuel from this store, either by bringing it to the surface or by submerging beside it. There was provision for compensation by weight of water for petrol withdrawn.

The examination of such a find was interesting enough to lead to delay, but with the submarines of the enemy probably not far off, and with little prospect of speedily detaching the tank from its anchorage, the finders were well advised to destroy it. A single shot from a light gun smashed the tank to atoms, and the oil that spread over the surface of the sea was not the last film of oil which from such a source floated far to puzzle the mariners and raise strange tales.—Ex.

There was a rumor around town the other day that a case of smallpox had been discovered. As the rumor has now been doubled and two cases are spoken of, it might be as well to say that Dr. Cade says most emphatically that there is no sign of this disease in the city.

- FACT HUNGER -

As children, our first demand is for nourishment; our second for facts.

All through life we go about searching for information.

We make a new acquaintance; but before we will accept him as a friend or invite him to our home we ask for facts about him.

We visit a foreign land; and from the moment we step across its border we are asking questions—searching for facts.

We are asked to try a new food product; isn't it instinctive with us to ask at once:

"Who makes this new article?"

"How is it made? what goes into it?"

"Is it worth the price charged for it?"

Facts—we are simply hungry for them.

Strange, isn't it, that we should so often have to search for them? Odd, that some manufacturers still withhold the facts about their product. Not always because they are facts to be ashamed of—for there are many worthy articles yet unadvertised.

But it will not be so much longer. The fact-hunger of the human race is becoming keener and keener. The more facts we get, the keener our relish for more of them.

Soon it will be impossible to sell a man or a woman anything until everything has been told about the goods that can be told through Advertising.

The public has discovered that Advertising tells much-needed facts—that, in fact, Advertising satisfies fact-hunger.

If you are doing a local business talk over your advertising problems with the Advertising Department of this newspaper.
If you are doing a provincial or national business it would be well for you to have the counsel and assistance of a good advertising agency. A list of these will be furnished, without cost or obligation, by the Secretary of Canadian Press Association, Room 503, Lumsden Building, Toronto.
