IRISH TRAITOR ARRESTED AND HUN SHIP SUNK

Casement Tried to Land Guns on Irish Coast—German Cruiser Sunk and Casement Taken—Zep Raid on England.

(Special to The Daily News.)

London, April 25.—The Admiralty announces that Sir Roger Casement has been arrested while attempting a gun-running expedition on the west coast of Ireland.

A German auxiliary cruiser, laden with arms and ammunition, and disguised as a neutral merchant ship has been sunk. She was accompanied by a German submarine. Casement and his companions have been arrested. Sir Roger will be tried for treason.

Casement is the notorious Irishman who left Britain for Germany at the beginning of the war and endeavored to get Irish prisoners to enlist with the Germans.

Zeppelin Raid.

Four or five Zeppelins raided the Lincolnshire coast last night and dropped seventy bombs. One man was injured.

British Air Raid.

Eight British aeroplanes raided and destroyed the Turco-German camp at Quatia, near the Suez Canal, forcing the withdrawal of the army of the enemy.

MANY INDIANS CONFIRMED

During the ooligan fishing Indians gather from all the villages on the Naas River at Fishery Bay which is about fifteen miles up this river from the coast. The work of catching these small fish which are very oily, and boiling them to get the grease lasts about seven weeks. Archdeacon Collison has for some time past been giving religious instructions to the natives gathered for this fishing, and on Good Friday afternoon Bishop Du Vernet confirmed in St. Peter's Church, Fishery Bay, fifty-four candidates presented by the Archdeacon. There were thirty young men and twenty four young women, 17 came from Kincolith, 20 from Lakkalzap, 6 from Aiyansh, 4 from Gitladamiks and 2 from Underleaf or Gwinoha—all villages on the Naas river; 3 came from Gitwangool, and 2 from Gitwangak, villages on or near the upper Skeena river. The old road across from the upper Skeena to the upper Naas used to be called the "Grease Trail" because of the hundreds who traveled it to secure the ooligan grease. The government has opened a shorter road from Gitwangak by way of the Gitwangool valley to the Naas river so that the old trail by way of the Kispiox valley above Hazelton is now seldom taken.

CARNIVAL OF THE ALLIES WAS TREMENDOUS SUCCESS

EVERY BOOTH DID HUGE BUSINESS AND RESULTS FAR EXCEEDED EXPECTATIONS—FLOUR THROGGED WITH CROWDS UNTIL AFTER MIDNIGHT LAST NIGHT

After six o'clock last evening every road led to Acropolis Hill, where Prince Rupert held high carnival in the Exhibition Building, in aid of the Red Cross fund. Along towards eight o'clock, when the Metlakatlah band marched up to the stage everybody in town seemed to be there, young and old, though the latter term is scarcely correct for all were young again.

The interior of the building presented one of the gayest spectacles ever devised by the ladies of Prince Rupert and the making of the decorations for the various booths and the placing of them in position must have taken many days of hard work on the part of the ladies in charge and their willing assistants.

The Scandinavian booth, located upstairs in the right hand corner on entering, was draped with Canadian flags, Union Jacks and Prince Rupert's colors with evergreens covering up the woodwork. Judging by the tables loaded with the daintiest things to eat, Mrs. Sam Johnson, Mrs. Olof Hanson, Mrs. A. Akerberg and the other members of the Valhalla Society must have been very busy for days. Most of the dainties were distinctly Scandinavian. A noticeable feature on one of the tables was a flag staff made of solid brass by Andy Akerberg. This alone must have represented days of work. Every detail was perfect down to the little stantions around the base and the encircling chain.

At the opposite corner upstairs was a corner of Japan, where Mrs. Cambie and her assistants dispensed tea to visitors. The ladies in their garb and in the decorations of their booth were very successful in their picturing of the land of the chrysanthemum. Large chrysanthemums were everywhere while cherry blossoms filled the air. A beautifully executed Japanese hanging basket was a particularly bright spot. This was the work of Mrs. Kanaya of Skeena City.

Just below the Japanese section was Italy, under the management of Mrs. J. E. Merryfield and a host of willing helpers. Here again the decorations were of the prettiest, the walls being covered with evergreens in which were tucked away roses of all shades, while the windows were formed into cute little diamond panes of Italy. During the evening a bevy of beautiful Italian Girls sang and danced while each member of the party seemed to be an expert on the guitar, mandoline or violin. The musical director was Harry Harvey who was brilliantly got up as a Spanish Don. Outside, Signor Cariboo entertained the crowd in stentorian tones to patronise the cabaret and his efforts were not in vain. The signor was none other than Harry Evans.

Next to Italy was India, which had been most tastefully produced by the girls chapter of the I. O. D. E. under the management of Miss King. The ladies were beautifully garbed in Indian costume and each must have represented a princess. There was a monster elephant there and many other Indian features. The paintings which lined the back of the booth, which were the work of Miss Eason, were greatly admired.

Next came little Belgium, under the management of Mrs. J. M. Clancy. Here, the prevailing tones were the black, yellow and red which have become so familiar since that epoch-making August day. In this booth, the ladies offered everything imaginable in confectionery, daintily packed.

Canada, under the care of Mrs. William Manson, was next door and here there was a splendid display of the handiwork of the local Indians who gave of their best in basket work, etc. for the occasion. As a side-show there was the famous heirloom from the Naas, the "potlach" coat of days long since gone. It was a remarkable little garment of coon skin with cariboo thongs tipped with the hooves of the mountain goat.

Great Britain, with a stall for each country, was under the care of Mrs. Morrow, Mrs. Frizzell, Mrs. Henning and Mrs. Morrissey. With a profusion of Union Jacks surmounted by the bull-dog standing guard this corner was typically British. In Wales they displayed home cooking which must have tempted many purchasers, in Ireland, which was the true color of Ireland, there was an assortment of fancy work which no lady could pass, while Scotland and England was a real old country store where Jack Venables, Walter Harper and R. E. Benson were able assistants.

France, with Mrs. Besner in charge, was another bower of beauty, with the tri-color everywhere and a profusion of roses looking out from every corner, while "Vive La France" was blazoned across the front. Here there was a wheel of fortune which for once was not considered a game of chance, and an assortment of useful and ornamental articles which anyone might have for ten cents, if they picked the right number.

Next door, Mrs. Neil MacKay, as a Portuguese fortune-teller did her best to direct the lives of all who came to visit her.

A little way along Ben Self was doing a roaring trade in a game he called "Honest John." Ben was freely offering dollars for ten cents each and found many takers.
